Ultimatum Sent to Union Chiefs by U.S. Mediators

Board Demands They Present Peace Plan to 12,000 Lumber Strikers

Drastic Action Seen

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

In what appeared to be a prelude to drastic action, the Defense Mediation Board yesterday delivered an ultimatum to union leaders to present a back-to-work proposal by the board to 12,000 striking loggers and lumbermill workers in the Puget Sound, Wash., area.

Backed by President Roosevelt's warning in his Tuesday night broadcast that "the American people expect that impartial recommendations of our Government services will be followed by both capital and labor," the board tersely wired union heads yesterday:

"The board has received your telegram of May 29. It does not appear from your reply that you have complied with the request made in the board's wire of May 28—The board requests that you bring this telegram to the personal attention of every one with the power to vote upon the acceptance or rejection of the board's recommendations.'

"Please inform this board by wire whether or not it is your intention to comply with this request."

Sent by Dykstra

The message was sent by Chairman C. A. Dykstra to officials of the C. I. O. International Woodworkers of America. It followed receipt by the board of a complaint from the union that it was being asked to return to work "under exceedingly unfair conditions."

The board's request for resubmission of its plan was seen as leading to the first test case of its powers to make binding recommendations.

The complicated history of the strike, which began May 9, and has shut down 32 lumbering operations in the Seattle area:

On May 23 the board proposed a settlement of the strike which involved wage increases and vacation allowances and provided that an impartial commission be created to study the entire Douglas fir industry. The board proposed that if any subsequent wage and monetary adjustments appeared to be called for as a result of the commission's findings, these should be retroactive to the date of the return to work.

Employers Agreed

Employers agreed to the proposal, but delegated representatives of the union members voted to reject it.

Wednesday Dykstra wired union leaders to reconsider their decision in the light of the President's emergency declaration and statement that all "patriotic citizens" should accept board recommendations. He specifically asked that his wire and back-to-work plea be brought to the attention of each union member.

Yesterday Union President O. M. Orton and Vice President Ilmar Koivunen wired Dykstra that the board recommendations already had been referred to the striking members "in special meetings" where they had been rejected.

Orton and Koivunen added that "the fabulously rich lumber industry in western Washington" had granted better wages and working conditions to 10,000 other I. W. A. members and that to return to work pending an industry study "would only permit the viciously antilabor Weyerhauser Long Bell operators to gather additional strength for their continuous fight against the

The Day in Sports

162,000 See Rose Capture 500-Mile Race; Nats Lose Pair

AUTO RACING—After driving his own car to pieces, Mauri Rose, young warplane engineer, took the wheel of Fred Davis' hopelessly trailing machine he described as an "old wreck," and drove it to victory in the 500-mile Memorial Day Indianapolis Speedway classic. Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., finished second and Ted Horn, of Hawthorne, N. J., came in third. An estimated crowd of 162,000 was on hand.

BASEBALL—The Nats ran their losing streak to an even dozen with a double defeat handed them by Philadelphia's Athletics before a crowd of 7,500 in Griffith Stadium. Dutch Leonard pitched loss No. 11, a 7-4 affair. Washington used five pitchers in the second game, grabbed a two-run lead in the fifth when Buddy Lewis hit a home run, and then watched it fade as the Athletics built up a 14-4 victory. The Athletics moved into a fifth-place tie with Boston.

The Chicago White Sox beat the American League leading Cleveland Indians, 7-1 and 5-2, to move to within two games of the lead. In the National League the front-running St. Louis Cardinals beat Cincinnati's World champions, 4-1, then lost in 13 innings, 3-2. Brooklyn, with two victories over New York, moved to within two games of the Cards' lead.

HORSE RACING—The holiday sent a near record crowd of 12,000 to Charles Town, where Mrs. Mary Knierem's Red Wrack ran away with the Decoration Day Purse, beating Pimlico Lady and Blahblah. At Belmont, 51-71 turned out to see Your Chance win the $25,000 Suburban Handicap. It was the greatest turnout in New York racing history. Mrs. George D. Widener's 4-year-old beat Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash and Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put. Charles S. Howard's Mioland finished fifth, behind Haltal, in the 56-year-old classic.

Survey of 100 Families Shows Discrimination in 5-Cent Milk

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Figures gleaned in a sampling survey of 100 needy Washington families were reported yesterday by the District Nutrition Committee, illustrating the discriminstion which prevails in the 5-cent milk distribution program.

Fifty of the cases involved heads of families unable to pay for hospital and medical care and who depend upon public charity for this service. The remainder concerned the home lives of 50 expectant mothers who are regular visitors at Health Department prenatal clinics.

Although all 100 are in the very needy class, none is on relief, either because of technical ineligibility or from choice. Heads of none of the families are certified for WPA jobs. Hence, none is entitled to milk cards which authorize the purchase of surplus milk at 5 cents a quart.

Of the 50 family case histories obtained at the hospital permit bureau, it was discovered:

The average monthly income was $58.25.

There were 232 individuals in the 50 families, making an average of 4.64 persons per group.

For subsistence, the average individual had $8.59 a month to cover all expenses—food, clothing, incidentals, etc.—except rent, which the investigators excluded from the table because of its extreme variability.

A similar picture was presented by the 50 families culled from records of the prenatal clinics. They represented 240 individuals with an average income of $51.48 a month, $7.27 being the per capita figure.

These indigent groups, who are managing to get along without public relief on such skinny budgets, may be taken as a cross-section of a serious nutritional problem confronting the District. So says Dr. Margaret Nicholson, pediatrician and chairman of a special subcommittee of the District Nutrition Committee which gathered the figures.

To deny them the privilege of buying milk at 5 cents a quart is not only to commit a personal injustice

Vigilance for Liberty

U. S. on Watch for Saboteurs, Guards Doubled at Riverdale

Guards at the Riverdale (Md.) plant of the Engineering Research Co. were doubled over the weekend at the suggestion of the Federal Bureau of Investigation because of "trouble expected in various parts of the country," The Post learned last night.

The Engineering Research Co. manufactures a small commercial airplane suitable for training and makes numerous parts for military airplanes, including gun turrets. The plant employs between 300 and 500 workmen, under direction of Henry A. Berliner, president, of 2841 Tilden Street Northwest.

Moves to protect the local plant were part of a Nation-wide vigil, civilian and military, to protect defense industries after tips flashed across the continent pointing to an outbreak of Memorial Day weekend sabotage.

Apparently cautioned by telephone warnings from the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, watchful men took to posts up and down the East and West Coasts and across the land. At factory, port and waterfront, they stood alert with arms ready.

Military officers did not say that orders for the alert came from any central Federal source, but many civilian authorities said their defense-vital communities were advised by the FBI to exercise extraordinary vigilance over the Memorial Day weekend. One aircraft manufacturer said all plane plants in the country received word from the FBI to close for the weekend, the Associated Press reported.

There were no reports of sabotage as the holiday began to wane, but by nightfall, these developments had taken place:

Laredo, Tex.—Police, augmented by a detail of soldiers from Fort McIntosh, guarded the International Bridge. Mayor Hugh S. Cluck said he had received a tip that an attempt would be made to blow it up.

Washington, D. C.—Coast Guard and customs agents ordered to extreme watchfulness after a report from "outside the Government" that boats, docks and other shipping facilities were in danger of sabotage.

New York—Brooklyn waterfront and all New York City defense production centers placed under stricter watch. Farmingdale, Long Island, saw guards increased at Republic Aircraft Corporation and

For a Negotiated Peace

2,500 Hear Plea for Roosevelt To Make Deal With Germany

The Keep America Out of War Congress opened a three-day session here last night with a mass meeting that heard its leaders appeal to the President to seek a negotiated peace between Germany and Britain before "plunging this Nation into war."

The pleas for peace and repeated charges that President Roosevelt was preaching fear of Hitler in order to arouse pro-war sentiment among the Nation's citizens, were made before a throng of 2,500 that packed Turner's Arena.

The President's policy of all aid to Britain was blasted and ridiculed by speakers who included Senator Burton Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana; Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the Republican Senator from Ohio; Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, and John T. Flynn, columnist and chairman of the Congress.

Senator Wheeler asserted that for the past eight years, under the Roosevelt Administration, the Nation has been drifting away from parliamentary government to one-man government, and charged that a war for the United States would mean substitution of dictatorship for democracy, not only during the war but afterwards.

After the war, even if we win, Wheeler said, there will be such condition of unemployment and unrest that the government will demand not only continuance of the War Dead Honored

Bugles hard blown in the threats of war sang of quiet sleep to the soldier dead all of yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery where thousands of Washingtonians and Memorial Day visitors to the Capital did homage to Americans who died for their country.

More than a score of ceremonies, full of flags, uniforms and rolling band music, were held at monuments and in the crowded cemetery—an outpouring of tribute which began with a parade at 9:45 a. m. up Constitution Avenue.

In the wet cedars by the Argonne Cross in Arlington Cemetery, the American Legion, acting on a resolution from its national executive committee, memorialized American World War dead in Romagne-Sous-Montfaucon (14,242), Seringes-et-Nesles (6,012), Thiaucourt (4,152), Bony (1,836), Suresnes (1,541), Belleau (2,238), Waereghem (367) and those in the isolated graves.

There could be no "fitting ceremonies" this year "due to the German occupation of France and Belgium." So 3,000 miles from the French cemeteries the United States Marine Band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and "La Marseillaise" and the Legionnaires brought heavy green wreaths to the base of the monument.

Lived Through Blitzkrieg

Present was tall, bearded Sedley Peck, member, special subcommittee, Legion Department of France, who lived there through the blitzkrieg and later escorted American volunteer ambulance drivers to France. And off, in every area of the cemetery were thousands of men, women and children, stooped over the grass to place flowers and flags on graves while other thousands passed back and forth by the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, part of the day in the rain.

The parade up Constitution Avenue caught Washington on a holiday morning when comparatively few people were on the streets. It required 22 minutes to pass a given point; in the line were 156 pieces of horse-drawn artillery, 67 pieces of motorized artillery, 15 automobiles, 10 bands, 1,086 uniformed marchers, 20 marchers in civilian clothes, 156 horsemen, a unit of CCC enrollees, a parade all told of 1,911 participants, led by the Third Cavalry Mounted Band and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander, District National Guard, as marshal.

In the reviewing stand were Ben Hilliard, jr., of Denver, Colo., commander, 40 & 8; Gen. William Bryden, deputy chief of staff, representing the War Department; Charles H. Kenlon, assistant director, CCC; Commander R. A. Dyer, U. S. N., representing the Navy Yard; Charles Yesterday's lowest temperature was 56 degrees at noon and the highest 66 at 5 p. m. In a long-range forecast for this area—beginning at 7:30 p. m. yesterday and ending at the same hour next Wednesday—Mitchell predicted considerable cloudiness with the likelihood of occasional showers starting sometime tomorrow.

Today, however, will be fair with maximum temperature of 78 degrees. Clouds, the Weather Bureau reported, will begin gathering early tomorrow and occasional showers are believed likely.

60-Mile-an-Hour Battle Downed Hood, Her Guns Blazing

By J. P. Ni Nixon,
Reuters Special Correspondent With the Royal Navy.

London, May 30.—I watched the "battle of giants" which culminated in the sinking of the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck.

Standing on the bridge of one of his majesty's ships I saw the 42,100-ton Hood, long the world's largest warship, go down only 200 or 300 yards away with her guns still firing.

The end of the mighty Hood was an almost unbelievable nightmare. Shortly after the engagement began shells hit the 21-year-old battle cruiser.

There was a bright sheet of flame and she blew up.

Parts of her great hull were thrown hundreds of feet into the air and in a few minutes all that remained was a patch of smoke on the water and some small bits of wreckage.

The battleship Prince of Wales was hit soon afterward by a 15-inch naval shell but the damage was slight.

The "battle of the giants" was the climax of a chase by the Hood and Prince of Wales and their accompanying destroyers at top speed to prevent the Bismarck from breaking out into the Atlantic to attack convoys.

Pursuit began off Iceland and continued hour after hour in the eerie half light of an Arctic night.

British Ask U.S. To Curtail Use Of Some Foods

They Seek Surpluses To Brighten Up Their 'Unhappy, Dull' Diet

By Joseph S. Evans, Jr.

London, May 30.—An urgent appeal to the people of the United States to reduce their normal consumption of milk and cream, sugar, teas, canned salmon and canned meat, so that the resulting surpluses can be sent to England where they are vitally needed, was made today by Lord Woolton, minister of food.

The United States has not a sufficient surplus over its normal home consumption to supply the milk and cream, sugar, cheese and canned salmon and meat, which would be such a boon for Britain, Lord Woolton said. It was understood that in order to meet Britain's needs, the people of the United States would have to undergo one milkless day a week, one canned salmonless day each two weeks and one canned meatless day every month and one cheeseless week out of every month. It was difficult to estimate the needed cut in sugar consumption, the minister said, but added that he hoped to have figures ready for that field by the time of his broadcast.

Lack Shipping Facilities

Britain also needs dried fruit, particularly apples and raisins, eggs, fruit and tomato juice, of which the United States has surpluses but where the lack of merchant bottoms available makes importing difficult, he said.

It was revealed that the first consignment of foodstuffs sent to Brit-

2,400 on Bismarck, Including 400 Cadets, Under 20 Years Old

By the Associated Press

An English Port, May 30.—Hundreds of German seamen floundered helplessly in the sea with no life rafts to cling to after 40 British salvos and three "steel fish" sent the great battleship Bismarck, pride of the German navy, to the bottom last Tuesday, the chief petty officer of a British warship said today.

The warship arrived here with approximately 100 German officers and men who survived the sinking.

Tonight, a survivor was quoted as saying the huge craft was crowded with 2,400 officers and men, 400 of them cadets under 20 years of age. Battleships ordinarily carry not more than 1,500 men.

"'It was hell,'" the British quoted this prisoner as saying.

"'Great holes burst out in us and flames spread around every direction.

"'We'd run this way and then something else would hit.

"'It was hideous.'"

In the words of the British petty officer the Rodney and another British battleship "banged hell out of her," and two British torpedoes lift-

Bismarck's Tonnage Now Put at 50,000

London, May 30 (AP).—The Bismarck was a 50,000-ton vessel instead of the 35,000 carried in official registers, a British naval officer who helped destroy the German declared tonight.

Such a tonnage would have made the Bismarck the world's largest warship.

"The Bismarck was undoubtedly far above anything we had thought of," said the officer.

Nazis Destroy Papers as British Seize Martinique-Bound Ship

By the Associated Press

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, May 30.—Intercepted at sea by a British cruiser while passengers were celebrating with champagne their expected arrival at Martinique, the 8,379-ton French passenger ship Winnipeg is in Port-of-Spain harbor and hundreds of her German passengers have been interned.

Two American-born women told today how scores of Germans bound for the French colony of Martinique threw hundred of letters and other papers into the ocean after the cruiser had fired a shot across the Winnipeg's bow and escorted her to Trinidad.

Of the 751 passengers aboard, 210 Germans, 76 Austrians and 70 unclassified persons have been interned pending investigation.

[Officials here had had no word last night of the seizure of the Winnipeg. While they expressed interest in the fact that so many Germans were on their way to Martinique no special concern was evidenced, pending further information. It was pointed out that many of the Germans might be refugees. Confidence was expressed here, meanwhile, that British officials' examination of the background of those detained would be thorough. —Editor's note.]

Roosevelt Signs Bill Exempting Three-Year Men

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt signed a bill late today exempting from the draft all men who have served three consecutive years in the Marine Corps, Coast Guard or Navy.

It also exempts men who have spent one year in any of the three services and two in the reserve.

The President spent Memorial Day in as complete isolation from the cares of his office as is attainable for him.

He took advantage of the chance to stay in bed until almost noon, dispose of a few pressing matters of public business, and then take a long drive over the back roads of Dutchess County.

Strive to Escape

Berlin, May 30.—Anglo-Greek resistance on Crete has broken down on all fronts and complete occupation of that Mediterranean island by Axis forces may be anticipated for the immediate future. This, in substance, is the official opinion of the German high command expressed in a communique this afternoon.

With this "most daring action in the history of war" approaching its conclusion, German military quarters believed the preponderant majority of enemy troops on Crete were doomed either to destruction or capture.

All harbors on the northern coast of the island are firmly in German hands. On the precipitous 160-mile-long southern coast of Crete, authoritative quarters assert, there is not a single harbor from which it would be possible to evacuate large numbers of troops.

Remnants of the dispersed British forces are fleeing toward the southern coast, the Germans assert, closely followed by German units. The British evidently hope, it is said here, to be able to get aboard vessels during the night hours.

Many Prisoners Taken

Many prisoners are said to have been taken and large quantities of war materials, including tanks and vehicles and 30 light and heavy cannon. Large quantities of supplies were also captured, the Germans declare, and German and Italian prisoners taken by the British in the Balkans freed.

The high command reverted today to its charges that German parachutists had been grossly mishandled in Crete. Wounded German soldiers allegedly were mutilated in bestial fashion.

Members of the population of Crete responsible for committing these "barbaric atrocities," the German command declares, "will be dealt with in the most severe manner." There can be no doubt, says the high command, that the senseless, as well as untrue contention of Winston Churchill that German soldiers had parachuted in enemy uniforms was responsible for the major portion of these bestialities.

Enemy Columns Bombed

The Germans declared they would enact ten-fold reprisals against British prisoners for every German soldier mishandled. If the populace of Crete proves also to have been engaged in such actions, it appears reasonable that these ten-fold reprisals would be enacted against

LEADER . . .

"Germany does not believe that President Roosevelt spoke in the name of the American people," says a Nazi spokesman, "and they will not support his insults or believe his senseless allegations."

That's what the Germans think—or say they think.

George Gallup thinks differently. Going over the President's speech item by item, Gallup found that most of the points had been touched on by one poll or another—and that the American people support the President.

And the current poll—reported for the first time in tomorrow's Washington Post—is timely, indeed, for it cuts right to the heart of the problem.

Here's the question:

"Would you rather see Britain surrender to Germany than have the United States go into the war?"

The answer—in tomorrow's Post.

Other articles on the President's speech and its effect upon the thinking of the American people have been written by Hedley Donovan, of The Post staff, and Columnists Ernest Lindley and Alsop and Kintner.

Also in tomorrow's Post, a full page portrait of the President, in rotogravure, with the 7 point summary of his May 27 speech proclaiming a national emergency.

SEA POWER . . .

"If the Axis powers fail to gain control of the seas, they are certainly defeated," President Roosevelt said in his address.

Naval might and its vital importance in the war are discussed by Edward T. Folliard, of The Post staff. How Anglo-American maritime supremacy can keep Hitler from control of the seas and ultimate victory is the question he answers in tomorrow's Post.

THRILLER . . .

Another thriller of the sea—but this time fiction, not fact—is the Sunday Post complete novel, "Gold Ahoy!" By H. Bedford-Jones, the well-known magazine writer. It tells of a girl who went to find her father in the California gold fields and ended by becoming—temporarily—queen of one of the Hawaiian Islands.

PEOPLE . . .

Comedians are not stars, but comets; they rise dimly on the horizon, grow in brilliance and in public attention, then fade and are forgotten. Latest to reach that middle stage of brilliance is the team of Abbott and Costello, about whom you can read in Sunday's Amusement Section . . . Remember "Alabama" Pitts? Bill Cunningham does, and in his Sunday column gives the real story of why the sports writers gave him such a build-up . . . Carl Sandburg tells a yarn about Hitler at the gates of Hell, and throws in a few comments about mystery man Hess . . . Monsignor Ryan, of Catholic University, has written a book and Sunday's Post reviews it.

SPECIALS . . .

Shirley Povich tells us that he thinks his regular Sunday piece, "To Whom It May Concern," is the best he does, so we commend tomorrow's to your attention . . . Eyewitness Depicts Fate Of Bismarck ed her bodily out of the water before the third sent the new dreadnought to the bottom in revenge for destruction of Britain's 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood.

"There were a lot of Jerries in the water," said Chief Petty Officer L. R. Crocker," and there was nothing for them to hold on to, not even a raft, although some of them were wearing Japanese lifebelts."

Crocker said rescue efforts were halted by attacks of German submarines and aircraft on British ships attempting to pick up the survivors and he quoted one Nazi officer as saying, "'It is a bad policy to pick up survivors in wartime.'"

"I couldn't understand a ship of the type of the Bismarck not having rafts," Crocker continued, "The biggest thing I saw afloat was a piece of timber about 6 feet long."

Crocker gave the following eyewitness account of the Bismarck's last bitter hours:

"We sighted the Bismarck about 9 a. m. Tuesday. She was then engaged and doing barely 10 knots.

Set Afire, Guns Roar

"She fired a number of salvos which came over the top. We gave her three salvos for'ard. The Bismarck had to be destroyed and we were out to do it.

I could see explosions bursting aboard the German, which was concentrating her fire mainly on the Rodney (British battleship). I guess the Nazis were surprised to see us. It's my belief, anyway, that they didn't spot us until our salvoes crashed into them.

"Now the Bismarck was afire, hut her guns were still roaring.

"At the end of an hour's action, the Bismarck stopped moving altogether. The Rodney and another British battleship were banging hell out of her."

As Crocker gave his dramatic description of the battle, British officials said the rescue of the Bismarck's survivors had to be halted because of the persistence of German bombers attacking British warships while the drowning men were being dragged from the water.

Survivors Are Silent

One of the returning British craft had 24 German seamen aboard, none of them officers. All were grimly silent. The first German down the gangplank had to be carried on the back of a medical corps private; his head was swathed in bandages.

Many of the survivors wore no shoes, indicating that they had been in the water for some time before being picked up.

Crocker declared:

"As we went in closer to do our stuff, I saw our shells knock the brains out of the Bismarck. We smashed her after-control and the fire aboard her was spreading.

"But the Nazis had guts.

"The Rodney knocked her after-turret clean out until it was hanging over the side. The Bismarck was now ablaze from stem to stern, and her guns at last were silent.

"The order came to sink the Bismarck, and we banged her like the devil with our guns giving her roughly 40 salvoes.

Third Torpedo Got Her

"After that we put two steel fish into the starboard side. I saw many of the Nazis waving coats as the Bismarck's stern was awash. The weather was blowing hard by this time and visibility was low. That's how we'd surprised her.

"The torpedoes lifted her bodily out of the water. What a sight! Then a cruiser from port side slammed a third torpedo into her, and that finished her off. It was the last shot fired.

"The Bismarck stood up for a few seconds and gradually keeled over towards the port side.

"Then she turned right over, showing her keel, and slid back. As she disappeared she seemed to break up.

"There were a lot of Jerries in the water and there was nothing for them to hold onto—not even a raft—although some of them were wearing Japanese lifebelts.

"If they had had rafts or boats more of them would have been saved.

Tried to Aid Survivors

"We steamed up to the survivors and started picking them up.

"There were roughly about eight (in one group) and they were punch drunk with gunfire and didn't know whether they were coming or going.

"German submarines and aircraft were reported and this caused rescue work to be stopped. We beat it.

"There were no casualties on our ship.

"The survivors were given restoratives before being taken up to bed. Most of them were fairly young.

"On the run back to this country one of the survivors died and was buried at sea.

"We didn't have the Nazi ensign to use at the burial so an old German imperial ensign was used.

"All Nazi officers and men on deck gave the Nazi salute as the remains went over the side. Full naval honors were carried out by the British officers and men.

Believed Ship Unsinkable

"Actually the Nazis were glad to be aboard our ship after the terrific hammering they received. Their attitude was pretty good and they showed no signs of truculence.

"One of the officers told me he and the crew were convinced that the Bismarck was unsinkable. Well, they learned differently.

"A British officer told me some of the survivors gave the Hitler salute to the Brtiish ensign on being pulled aboard.

"A former Nazi naval attache in London who was one of those saved gave short thanks to the British officers. He said, 'it is a bad policy to pick up any survivors in wartime.' That Nazi seemed indifferent whether he was rescued or not.

"After recovering, some of the prisoners played the piano in our recreation room and sang the 'Blue Danube.' Then they received a plate of soup with bread. They were under the impression it was the whole meal. Roast beef and vegetables followed. That gave them a shock. When pudding was served they seemed flabbergasted."

Bismarck Survivor Aided

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WOUNDED NAZI SEAMAN PUT ASHORE—This, one of the first pictures to arrive in this country of the survivors of the German battleship Bismarck, sunk Tuesday by the British after a five-day running sea battle, shows a wounded Nazi seaman being put ashore at an undisclosed British port. Two British sailors carry him up a gangway. (Photo cabled yesterday from London) which had been shadowing the Bismarck since the big vessel left Bergen, Norway, kept the Hood and Prince of Wales informed of her movements and thus helped find the quarry.

It did not get completely dark at any time that night.

We sighted the enemy at 6 a. m., when a curtain of snow suddenly lifted.

60-Mile-an-Hour Battle

They, too (the Germans) turned in toward their pursuers and the world's biggest warships were thundering toward each other at a combined speed of probably more than 60 miles an hour.

The tension of waiting for the battle to begin became acute.

The "open fire" order was given by signal.

Almost simultaneously, orange-gold flame burst with a roar from the Hood's forward guns. Within three seconds puffs of black smoke shot out from the Bismarck as she opened fire.

The Prince of Wales' guns then began firing. Dense clouds of yellow cordite smoke enveloped her bridge. She was to the left of the Hood, 200 or 300 yards away, and still surging forward on a parallel course.

Fountains of water shot up in her wake—first about 100 yards behind her and then only 50 yards astern.

The Hood thundered on and then, suddenly, she was hit.

Great Flames and Smoke

A shell, or shells, appeared to fall just forward of one of her after 15-inch gun turrets and great flames and heavy black smoke burst from her.

The Hood continued to fire and still raced forward.

What happened next was a strangling, sickening sight. There was a terrific explosion and the whole of a vast ship was enveloped in a flash of flame and smoke which rose high into the air in the shape of a giant mushroom.

Sections of funnels, masts and other parts of the ship hurtled hundreds of feet into the air and some of them fell on our ship.

The Hood's bow tilted vertically into the air and within three or four minutes she was gone entirely.

A destroyer was diverted to rescue work and managed to pick up three of the ship's company—two seamen and a midshipman.

Sunk By Dorsetshire

All this time the Prince of Wales continued pouring shells at the Bismarck. More than once spurts of water showed she was straddled

Again shells from the Bismarck crashed near the Prince of Wales, but she came out of the battle with little damage.

Then the Bismarck turned away to be pushed all that day and night and the next day over the Atlantic at top speed.

Twice during the night the Prince of Wales fired salvos and aircraft made attacks.

Finally there came the dramatic message that the cruiser Dorsetshire had torpedoed the Bismarck.

them also.

German parachutists who landed around Rethymno were brought into contact with the main body of the German forces today after having held out for eight days against superior numbers. The commander of Greek forces in the Candia vicinity is said to have offered to capitulate.

German planes "without pause," are officially declared yesterday to have bombed retreating columns of the enemy, as well as his troop concentrations and defensive positions.

In the Straits of Caso two British destroyers are said to have been sunk. Two merchant vessels totaling 1,600 tons, as well as a coastal boat and a patrol ship, are also said to have been destroyed in the waters about Crete.

The decisive stage in the invasion centered about the taking of British positions in the mountains southwest of Candia, military quarters said. Those defenses had been constructed over a period of ten months, and were designed to protect the Suda Bay from conquest from the land.

Two days ago, with German Alpine units in the vanguard, the British positions in this sector were broken, the Germans declare. Since then, they add, the advance of the German forces has not been stopped, and every strategically vital position on the northern and western portion of Crete has been captured.

The German units are now continuing eastward to meet their Italian Allies, who, having landed on the east of the island, are pushing their way to the west.

The press tonight emphasizes the strategic importance of the capture of Crete for the future progress of the war. German bombing planes are now only 400 miles from the entrance to the Suez Canal, German editors point out.

British Now Using New Defense Weapon

London (Saturday), May 31 (AP).—German raiders appearing over Liverpool, the surrounding Merseyside and northwestern England last night and early today were challenged by terrific antiaircraft barrages and, in one area, by an undisclosed new defense weapon.

Most raiders were said to have been kept at a great height, but some casualties and damaged were acknowledged in a west coastal city. Bombers also were reported over northern Ireland.

Freyberg Killed, Nazis Say

Berlin, May 30 (AP).—The German news agency, DNB, today carried a Damascus dispatch which said that Maj. Gen. B. C. Freyberg, the New Zealand World War hero who has commanded the Allied defense of Crete, had been killed in a plane crash while he and his aides were fleeing to Alexandria. The dispatch said the information came from "the Cairo radio." (There was no confirmation from Cairo or London.)

Nazi Losses Put at 12,000

London (Saturday), May 31 (U.P.),—A Cairo dispatch quoted a Greek government spokesman today as estimating German losses in Crete thus far at 12,000.

Britain Ready For News Crete Is Evacuated

By the Associated Press

London, May 30. — Significant omissions from tonight's Middle East communiques rather than details actually told left Britain ready for news of the evacuation of Crete, even though fierce fighting apparently still continues.

In London, fear that the Germans and Italians have finally broken through to land sea-borne troops after the 11 days of German aerial assaults increased in the absence of any word concerning recent naval operations around Crete.

Failure of the R. A. F. communique even to mention Crete stirred speculation whether the air attacks on the Germans there had been abandoned.

Informed sources carefully avoided discussing the possibility of evacuation of the island—which Prime Minister Churchill declared on May 7 Britain intended to "defend to the death."

Italian Isle Attacked

Usually well-posted quarters, however, admitted they were unable to account for the apparent shift of R. A. F. bombing raids from Crete to the Italian island of Scarpanto, which is between Crete and Rhodes.

They suggested that it might be for fear German planes were using the island as a way station en route to Iraq and as a base for the terrific air assaults on Crete.

The defenders of Crete were declared to be facing a situation similar to that in the last desperate days of the Greek campaign—colossal German air strength far outnumbering their own and the reckless forward thrust of Nazi soldiery in steadily growing force.

(The German high command declared the spectacular conquest by air already was virtually complete.)

[The United Press quoted British quarters in Cairo as saying that British forces still hold Candia, largest city of Crete where "heavy fighting" continues against German and Italian forces. The Germans claimed Candia, where 700 prisoners and vast amounts of war booty were said to have been taken.]

Challenge by Air Arm

Summing up the lessons of Crete, the London Evening Standard had this to say:

"Here the air weapon makes a direct challenge both to sea power and air power. Our ships are given another taste of the dive-bomber.

"Air-borne troops reveal that they have the capacity to translate themselves from an advance guard into an occupying force.

"The glider, the troop-carrying airplane and the parachutist now permit the ranging choice of strategy once thought to be the perquisite of naval power.

"Since we are going to have the biggest air force in the world, we also must resolve to extort from the new instrument the last ounce of power."

The British Middle East command told this story:

"Further German air-borne reinforcements reached the island. Intensive dive-bombing continued throughout the day and further adjustments have been made in the position held by our troops, who again exacted a heavy toll from the enemy."

The London press agreed that the situation in Crete was bad, generally attributing it to the German air strength.

Authoritative R. A. F. quarters said the Germans were employing at least as many planes as they did in all of Greece—up to 1,000—plus many additional troop transports and glider trains which they brought down on crowded, cramped airfields with reckless disregard for crashes.

Although the R. A. F. has undertaken some extremely hazardous long-range raids over Crete from distant bases, it was acknowledged that circumstances had prevented anything more than very limited support for the Imperial ground forces.

Military sources estimated that 60,000 to 70,000 British and Germans were engaged in the hand-to-hand fighting.

U. S. Must Match Force With Force, McNutt Declares

Johnson City, Tenn., May 30 (AP).—Confronted by a "war which will be endless until the world is wholly slave or wholly free," America's first task is to "mobilize our armed might to match force with force," Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt said here today.

But, he added, "we cannot expand armaments and contract democracy."

"We would be foolish, indeed, if we were to play into Hitler's hand by cutting down the privileges of life in a free country and curtailing the advantages of the thing we are defending," McNutt asserted in a Memorial Day address prepared for delivery at the Mountain Home Facility for Veterans.

"Let no one be deceived by deliberate or misconceived rumors," he added. "America's defense program is roaring far ahead of its schedule and it is gaining speed with every passing hour.

"But the second part of our task is equally important—strengthening our democratic faith, and extending the sweep of democratic ideals."

Former King of Siam Dies; Once Visited D. C. With Wife

Prajadhipok Resigned Throne in 1935; Succumbs in Britain

By the Associated Press

London, Saturday, May 31.—Former King Prajadhipok, of Siam (Thailand), died early today of a heart attack at his home at Virginia Water in Surrey. He was 47 years old.

He was the last absolute ruler of the land of sacred elephants, stepping down from the throne March 2, 1935, after a reign of 9 years and three months.

At the time the king was visiting England, and the Siamese parliament, dominated by politically-minded military leaders, took advantage of his absence to enact laws removing the last of his royal prerogatives.

The king also was ill at the time, suffering from cataracts of both eyes and threatened with blindness.

The former King and his tiny Queen Bambai Barnai spent three days in Washington in April, 1931. They were on a state visit and were attended with full ceremonial honors, including guards, royal salutes, official calls, a state dinner at the White House and bestowal of an LL. D. degree at George Washington University.

On April 30, 1931, the Washington visit was interrupted for a trip to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, where the King's left eye was examined, and an operation deemed necessary. On May 10, the operation for removal of a cataract was successfully performed by Dr. John M. Wheeler at Ophir Hall, White Plains, New York.

EX-KING PRAJADHIPOK

Revolt Fades As Iraqi Chief Flees to Iran

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, May 30.—Foreshadowing collapse of Iraq's four-week war with Britain, Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani and his henchmen have fled to Iran (Persia), British authorities announced tonight.

The flight came as British imperial forces, pressing through the Garden of Eden, reached a point within 5 miles of Bagdad, the national capital.

Official quarters said Rashid Ali, who seized power April 4 and started battling the British May 2, had taken with him his chief of staff, Amin Zaki, and the self-styled Regent Sharaf, whom he had named to act for the boy King Feisal II.

Reuters, British news agency, reported that the Governor of Bagdad, Younes Sebhaoui, formed a governing commission of the city's notables. He directed dissolution of party organizations and ordered their members to surrender their weapons to police.

A proclamation urged the population to remain calm and warned any disturbances would be sternly repressed.

The present status of the German aerial assistance which Rashid Ali has been receiving was not made clear.

The original regent, Emir Abdul Ilah, who was forced to flee in April, has returned in the wake of the British drive, and now is at Fallujah, British-held town just west of Bagdad, the British reported. A delegation of leading Bagdad citizens went out to meet him and tribal chieftains were said to be flocking to his standard.

The Middle East command reported its troops managed to cross a damaged iron bridge 8 miles west of Bagdad, and although impeded by flood waters loosed by the Iraqis in the narrow depression between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, had occupied Al Kadhimain, 5 miles northwest of Bagdad.

Another British column, following the Euphrates north from the Port of Basra, reported it had reached and occupied Ur, the Biblical Ur of the Chaldees which was Abraham's birthplace. Ur now is a junction point on the Basra-Bagdad railroad.

While the British land forces thus progressed, it was acknowledged here that Adolf Hitler's warplanes have given him control of the Mosul oil fields of eastern Iraq without getting any oil for him.

The pipeline to the refinery at Haifa, Palestine, has been cut off at its sources by the Iraqis since hostilities opened with Rashid Ali. The branch line into Syria has been closed for the past year, and there was no indication that the Iraqis or their German friends had been able to reopen it.

Japan Loyal To Nazi Pact, Matsuoka Says

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, May 30.—Repudiating reports from the United States that Japan had become indifferent to the tripartite pact Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka issued a formal statement tonight reaffirming Japan's loyalty to her triple alliance and threatening, with obvious reference to the trade dispute with the Netherlands East Indies, that if Japan's peaceful policy in the South Seas becomes impossible she might have to reconsider it.

The statement followed a call on Matsuoka by the Reich Ambassador, Maj. Gen. Eugen Ott, to report that a large part of the American Pacific fleet had been withdrawn from the Atlantic, and a meeting of the war council and other high army leaders at War Minister Gen. Eiki Tojo's residence this afternoon at which, the Domei News Agency said, the situation in China as well as Europe was discussed.

American reports in regard to Japan's attitude toward the tripartite pact, the statement said, were an "absurd misconception which can be ascribed only as misleading information willfully spread," and he (Matsuoka) "could not believe that the American authorities entertained any such misunderstanding."

Torpedo Officer Tells How It Felt To Sink Bismarck

(Editor's note: The British officer who fired the three torpedoes that finally sank the German battleship Bismarck last Tuesday told Friday night how it felt to administer the coup de grace. Here is his account given to Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent. For military reasons, he is anonymous.)

A British Port, May 30 (AP).—You can imagine how I feel.

This thing doesn't happen often to a man. The Bismarck had sunk the H. M. S. Hood and nothing pleased me more than to be able to let her have our torpedoes.

Here's the way is happened.

When I pressed my finger twice, that sent two torpedoes into her. When I pressed my finger a third time she went down.

I couldn't see much of what was going on.

I kept thinking what the fellows back at the torpedo school would say if I missed, so you know how I felt when I really saw her begin to move.

Mind you, all this time our other ships were walloping away at her with guns and I could see great flashes over her way although I couldn't see whether I was hitting her.

It was really a rough sea. Great waves were breaking about and we were tossing but the sight that was really magnificent was when this great beauty of a ship began turning over.

17,879-Ton Liner Sunk, Italy Admits

Rome, May 30 (AP).—A British torpedo has sunk the 17,879-ton Italian liner Conte Rosso, a transport laden with troops, presumably en route to reinforce the Axis in North Africa, it was officially acknowledged today. The announcement said most of those aboard had been saved.

Fascist warplanes were declared to have sunk two British auxiliary ships and a 2,000-ton steamer in harbor at Tobruk. North African land fighting was reported limited to the activity of artillery and patrols about Tobruk.

Artificial Fog Used in Crete, Italians Say

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 30.—The Allied defenders of Crete were declared here tonight to be wandering, trapped and demoralized, in the gray terror of an artificial fog laid down by the Nazis to handicap their desperate efforts to escape by sea.

For the British and their Greek and imperial comrades it was pictured as a disaster more complete even than Dunkerque. It was asserted that while exhausted groups of the defeated Allied army were clambering about Crete's harsh and twisted southern shores in search of rescue ships, only one detachment was known to have been picked up by a British destroyer, and others perilously took to the sea in little fishing boats.

The British had only the choice between capitulation and death, the Italians said, because they were trapped between advancing German and Italian troops.

To add to what was called here the fatal British predicament the British fleet was said to be in flight toward Alexandria, under a running attack from Italian bombers. The British destroyer Hereward was reported blown up, and in continuing rescue operations 329 of its crew had been picked up.

Paper in Lisbon Protests Remarks Of Roosevelt

Lisbon, Portugal, May 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt's references to the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands as potential bases for German attack on the Americas was described today by the influential newspaper Diario de Noticias as deserving "our most formal protest."

In an editorial, entitled "Dangerous Theories," Diario de Noticias asked:

"Can we conciliate Roosevelt's references to our Atlantic islands with his statement—later repeated by Hull to the press—of full respect for Portugal's sovereignty which Salazar mentioned in his official communique?"

Premier Salazar on May 8 declared that Portugal would defend her sovereignty.

The newspaper asked what Mr. Roosevelt meant by the term Western Hemisphere, and at the same time asserted it might become "a phantom hemisphere with the unlimited boundaries of a new imperialism."

Vichy Force Moves Against 'Free French'

By the United Press

Vichy, May 30.—A French Loyalist column has driven across the Sahara to the western shore of Lake Chad, base of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's "Free French" forces, it was reported tonight as the German radio announced Nazi consent for strengthening French Empire defense forces.

The Nazi statement and the reports indicating the start of a campaign to recapture the French African colonies seized by the "Free French" revealed a sharply stiffened French stand against both Britain and the De Gaullist forces.

The Vichy government warned several days ago that it was considering military action to recover its lost African possessions. Germany, it is known, has been urging Vichy to drive the "Free French" out of central Africa.

The French column pushing to Lake Chad was said to have occupied the military post of N'Guimi, apparently without encountering resistance, and to have set up a radio station and an airdome and installed a battalion of colonial troops.

Italy to Demand Tunis Concessions

By Daniel T. Brigham

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berne, Switzerland, May 30.—It was learned here tonight that, probably tomorrow, an Italian demand will be drafted on Vichy expressing a "desire" for concessions in Tenis, similar to those granted the Germans in Syria.

The note, it is understood, will point to "the inability of the French garrisons in Tunisia" to protect Italian shipping as was seen by the damage suffered by two Italian ships hit in Wednesday's bombing of the harbor Sfax.

It is believed here that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of French North Africa forces, is determined to resist, by arms if necessary, any encroachment on his territory, similar to that effected by the Axis forces in Syria.

The situation in Syria has definitely gotten out of hand. According to a dispatch from a Hungarian journalist in Beiruit, Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, French high commissioner for the mandated territories, though nominally still in charge of all administration there, now merely carries out the orders of the German consul, Herr von Roser, in Beirut.

Large numbers of German engineers and technicians have arrived to prepare more air bases, and a German staff has been installed in the Beirut meteorological service, owing to the "unsatisfactory data received from that post in the recent past." One source even alleged that owing to false information supplied from Beirut, the German high command was totally unprepared for the weather encountered in the Cretan campaign.

British Asks U. S. To Curtail Foods

sin from the United States under the Lend-Lease Act will arrive shortly in this country. It will be welcomed officially by Lord Woolton and Averell Harriman, President Roosevelt's envoy here in charge of expediting aid for Britain. The kinds of foodstuffs carried by the vessel could not be learned.

In appealing to the United States to "do without" certain foods in order that surpluses which Britain needs will be created, Lord Woolton emphasized that this country's position with respect to foods essential to the maintenance of life and health was secure. But he pointed out that there was more to living than the maintenance of physical life and that Britain's food supplies were unbalanced, necessitating an "unhappy and dull" diet.

He declared that he was determined that every child and nursing mother in Britain should have sufficient milk to insure that they won't suffer physically from the restricted wartime diet and that he was appealing for children only from the realistic rather than the sentimental standpoint, since when the war is over Britain must "go on with a healthy people." More than 2,000,000 children are vitally in need of milk, he said.

To Appeal to U. S. Women

Lord Woolton will voice his personal plea in a radio speech addressed particularly to the women of the United States the week after next when, he indicated, he will cite figures showing just how much the percentage of normal consumption should be cut down to furnish the necessary surpluses for Britain. It will entail personal sacrifices on the part of the American people, he said, but the foodstuffs will be procured under the Lend-Lease Act rather than as an outright gift so that producers in the United States will not suffer.

He declared that sufficient shipping space for the transport of the foods he hopes to secure would be made available despite the curtailment of Britain's merchant marine which, in the prewar period, carried 50 per cent of Britain's food supplies, into this country.

King and Queen Watch Their Rations

London, May 30 (AP).—The King and Queen like to use their weekly meat ration for a weekend roast, Queen Elizabeth told Minister of Food Lord Woolton today.

"Then we try to make it spread over the rest of the week, like so many thousands of other people do," she added.

Don't Curtail Use of Milk, Holman Says

Commenting on the plea of Lord Woolton, British food minister, yesterday, that Americans reduce their normal consumption of milk and cream, Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Association, said last night that such curtailed consumption would not be justified in view of our surpluses.

He pointed out that his organization tomorrow will launch "dairy month" to promote the consumption of dairy products in this country.

"We have more (dairy goods) on hand than the United States can eat and than we can get to England," Holman declared. "The farmers are asking us to eat more."

Holman placed America's milk production for May as 7 per cent above that of last May despite the dry weather. In 1940 the United States produced 110,000,000,000 pounds of milk.

At the same time milk, butter and cheese consumption has gone up about 1.5 per cent.

Surpluses in the dairy industry are in the form of butter, cheese and evaporated milk, stocks of which pile up when the supply of fresh milk exceeds the demand. Holman said American stocks of all these goods were now "good." He emphasized, however, that nothing goes to waste.

The effort to increase consumption in this country, especially in underprivileged groups, coincides with the national all-time high for production.

Farm Price Program Adopted on April 3

On April 3 the Agriculture Department announced a program of supporting farm food produce prices in order to stimulate production so America could help feed "Great Britain and other nations resisting aggression."

The Department announced it would step into the open commodity markets to buy products in sufficient quantities to maintain long-term prices at approximately these levels (Chicago basis):

Hogs, $9 per hundredweight; dairy products on the basis of butter at 31 cents a pound; chickens, 15 cents per pound, and eggs, 22 cents a dozen.

Farmers were to be urged to feed hogs to heavier weight to increase pork production, to increase dairy products by feeding cows more grain and by milking more cows, and to increase the size of their dairy flocks.

Larder Plentiful, Say U. S. Farm Officials

Agriculture officials last night declared that present food reserves in the United States plus supplies from the program of increased production now under way will stand any possible drain on "the larder of democracies."

They said they foresaw no need to inaugurate meatless or milkless days to provide England with needed foodstuffs as advocated by Lord Woolton, British minister of foods.

Removal of butter from the list of commodities available under the food stamp plan is not indicative of any acute shortage in butter or of dwindling supplies in other foodstuffs, it was said.

Officials pointed out that the food-stamp list changes frequently whenever surpluses develop or dwindle. Relief families cooperating in the plan get two blue stamps for each four orange stamps awarded on every dollar's worth of food purchases. The two blue stamps are then good for 50 cents worth of surplus commodities.

Mrs. Antoine Peissel, the former Martha Seale, of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Marcel Lowenstein, bound from Paris to Stamford, Conn. They are accompanied by their French husbands.

The women told a dramatic story of their 26-day voyage from Marseille in a vessel they said was intended to carry only a small fraction of the 751 accommodated.

Food was running low, they said, but champagne flowed freely Monday night in celebration of the expected docking on Tuesday at Martinique. Then came the shot across the bow.

Throughout the next day, en route to Trinidad, papers continued to be thrown out the portholes until a trail of letters bobed in the vessel's wake. Even typewriters went overboard, Mrs. Peissel said.

Officials said all with genuine American visas would be allowed to continue to the United States. They were silent on what would be done about the Winnipeg herself.

(The seizure of the French ship was reported Tuesday in Washington and French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye called at the State Department for information.)

Carol and Lupescu in Havana; They'll Have $540-Month Suite

Havana, May 30.—Former King Carol and Mme. Elena Lupescu, of Rumania, stepped on Cuban soil today to make their home in exile after a drama-packed eight-month flight from their now Nazi-dominated homeland.

The couple flashed wide smiles at the hundreds who lined the Havana waterfront. The crowd applauded in return.

A motor launch brought them ashore from the United States liner America. With them were four dogs and Ernest Urdareanu, Carol's faithful aide.

Mme. Lupescu wore a white-and-brown ensemble which included a white wrap-around turban, a brown blouse with white polka dots, white silk skirt, white shoes. She wore large pearl earrings and a big diamond ring on her left hand.

Carol was dressed in Havana fashion—white suit and Panama hat with a green band.

The couple looked after their dogs, then entered an automobile which took them to the Hotel Nacional, where they will live temporarily in a $540-a-month five-room suite.

After the flight of Carol and Mme. Lupescu from Rumania last September, Rumanian officials charged Carol had made off with $1,000,000.

Passengers reported Carol was highly pleased when he won a $17 bingo pot aboard ship last night.

Pepper Challenges Wheeler to Debate

Kansas City, May 30 (AP).—Senator Pepper, of Florida, today challenged Senator Wheeler, of Montana, to a foreign policy debate on the question, "Is the President Right?"

Pepper told a press conference he sent this wire to Wheeler at Washington:

"I have an engagement to speak in Helena, Mont., Wednesday evening, June 4. I shall discuss: 'Is the President Right?' I . . . would be very glad to share the platform with you . . . if you should be so disposed and find it possible to come."

state of national emergency, but even more powers for the President.

"Ninety-five per cent of the people of the United States are against entering the war," the Montana legislator claimed. "It is the Morgans and Rockfellers who want war. But if the people speak up, if the people say what they think, we won't get into the war."

The President said he knew what peace terms would be demanded by Hitler, Wheeler pointed out. If he knows, then why doesn't he tell the people and let them decide about the peace terms, he exclaimed.

Flynn urged that an attempt be made to end the war under terms which would allow England to retain her "independence and her sovereignty and the allegiance of her self-governing dominions—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa—and her navy."

"Put it up to Germany"

"It will be said that Germany will not make such a peace," Flynn asserted. "How do we know? Would it not be a work of wisdom and of mercy for the President to put the problem squarely up to Germany?"

The audience, which included scores of delegates to the three-day antiwar congress, applauded loudly of Charles A. Lindbergh, famed and long at the mention of the name flier and a leader of the America First Committee. The mention of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York; William Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, and Anthony Eden, British foreign affairs minister, aroused repeated boos.

Mrs. Taft charged that the sole purpose of the President's proclamation of a state of national emergency was, "to frighten the opposition to silence," She said.

"We hate Hitlerism. All our sympathy goes out to the people of Britain and of the little countries whose territory has been overrun, but we have no right to let emotion alone decide our national policy."

"If we are too weak to defend American liberties here, we are far far too weak to defend them there."

Depicts Horrible Reaction

Thomas warned that if America gets into this war a reaction will follow which will be "more horrible than can be imagined. Our sons," he said, "will have shed blood to create disunity and hate and dictatorship."

The President, Thomas maintained, hesitates from taking a direct step into the war for fear that his name will be blackened in history. He appealed to the assembly to besiege the White House and Congress with demand that the United States open a "peace offensive," and to pass the war referendum bill.

Earlier in the day three college students and two middle-aged women took to a soap box in Pulaski Triangle, in front of the National Theater, and harangued the holiday throng to "save our democracy" and attend the antiwar congress rally.

Crew Strife Halts Norfolk-New York Shipping Service

Norfolk, Va., May 30 (AP).—Alex Broughton, chief clerk for the Eastern Steamship Co., said today all of the line's ships operating between New York and Norfolk were tied up as a result of crews' demands which the company refused to grant. The nature of the demands was not disclosed.

The crew of the steamer Madison quit and was paid off when the vessel arrived in port Wednesday, and Broughton said crews of other steamers had followed suit.

The Madison, Lee and Washington are docked at the Old Dominion piers here with only skeleton personnel aboard. Sailings have been canceled temporarily.

Six German Food Ships Leave Chile

It is reported here that the ships will refuel at a Japanese island and will continue to Vladivostok where their cargo will be unloaded for delivery in Germany by rail across Russia.

U. S. to Speed Contracts As Spur to Arms Industry

Admitting that defense orders were so lightly sprinkled over American industry that there was no incentive for business men to add more shifts, expand subcontracting or accelerate production tempo, a high OPM official yesterday forecast remedial action in an immediate drive to award another $10,000,000,000 of defense contracts.

In an interview with The Post yesterday, John D. Biggers, OPM production director declared that in the light of the "clarification" of the defense objectives made by the President in his Tuesday night speech and declaration of an unlimited national emergency, the OPM would press to place immediate orders to be paid for by unexpended appropriations.

In addition, he indicated that even more orders would flow from new appropriations, which may be requested soon, for a greatly enlarged inventory of Army "critical" items.

Orders Fall Short

Biggers explained that with the exception of the aircraft industry, contracts awarded to date in other defense businesses fall far short of exhausting production resources. As a result, he said, most factories can easily complete work on their defense contracts within the time scheduled for their completion without adding more shifts or farming out the work on hand.

Since adding shifts and farming out are inclined to be troublesome and costly procedures, and since there is at present no compelling incentive for manufacturers to take these steps, the nation's productive effort is lagging behind its full potential, Biggers indicated.

He said that plans are being developed by the OPM to guarantee business against loss if it increased sub-contracting and added more shifts, and that the OPM was urging the Army to award all contracts possible and as soon as possible in order to supply business with an incentive to speed up.

The production chief acknowledged that the Washington concern with the seriousness of the present situation and the need for increased and accelerated production had not been reflected among businesses throughout the country, because the low volume of orders did not bear out the expressions of alarm.

He also agreed that the slow tempo could not be remedied by speeches, but had to be backed up with actual demand, in the form of contracts, for more work and more speed.

The President's speech this week, leaving no doubt as to the objectives and scope of the defense effort, would vastly facilitate the drive to let more orders and to make defense contractors adopt the 24-hour-a-day basis which is now necessary, Biggers said.

Contracts Lagging

Biggers' admission yesterday that in recent weeks the award of industrial contracts had been lagging had been also discussed earlier in the week by R. L. Mehornay, chief of the OPM defense contract service.

This official, charged with stimulating subcontracting, explained that the resistance came from prime contractors, unwilling "to work themselves out of a job, and still not convinced that there are other contracts waiting for them as soon as it is a truism that both labor and they finish those on hand."

Agreeing, Biggers declared that management worked their best when there was more work ahead of them.

In a singular reversal from what has heretofore been reported as his attitude, Biggers declared that the present load of defense contracts was "only kindling" which might "burn itself out unless some heavy logs are added."

The OPM conceives as the source of the "heavy logs" some $4,000,000,000 of Army appropriations and $5,000,000,000 of Navy money, as yet unexpended and against which no contracts have been issued, and an undisclosed unexpended balance of the $2,900,000,000 industrial allocation of the lease-lend funds.

In addition, it was learned, plans are crystallizing for the request of still more appropriations to supply "critical" military items—for the most part weapons, munitions, transportation and communication equipment—for an army of a size substantially larger than at present.

Biggers was careful to emphasize that the increased flow of orders the OPM hoped to stimulate could not be distributed evenly over all American industry, but instead would channel to plants equipped to handle the special tasks demanded by defense work.

3 Bombs Kill 30 in Dublin; 100 Injured

Dublin, May 31 (Saturday) (AP).—Three bombs dropped on this capital of neutral Eirie early today by unidentified aircraft killed at least 30 persons and injured between 100 and 200.

Two bombs struck north-side residential areas, demolishing homes and burying their occupants. The third struck about a half-mile from the center of the city and destroyed many shops.

A large fire, started in the residential area, was brought under control shortly before 5 a. m. (midnight E. S. T.) after blazing for three hours.

The planes were over the capital for about two hours, beginning at midnight, but did not release their bombs until about 2 a. m.

Anti-aircraft batteries fired on them constantly.

Police expressed belief that the bombing was unintentional, and even surmised that an anti-aircraft shell may have struck a plane and caused it to drop its bombs.

Scores of people were believed trapped in the wreckage of their north side homes.

Sailor Reveals Liverpool Losses

Ottawa, May 30 (AP).—Thousands of Nazi bombs "leveled buildings for a path 7 miles long and 2 miles wide" in Liverpool during the recent week-long blitz attack on that western England port, but didn't hit a single dock, a soldier who lived through the terrific raids, declared tonight.

"Jerry gave us everything," Private Fred Vincent said. "For seven straight nights we got it—1,000 planes a night. Heavy explosive, incendiaries by the thousands, delayed-action bombs, land mines—we got them all.

"But, here's the amazing thing. In all that time and with all those thousands of bombs there wasn't a dock hit. Waterfront sheds, yes, and ships were struck, but not a dock, and that's the main thing."

He said the "greatest antiaircraft barrage in England is concentrated around Liverpool" and the Germans "wouldn't come down under 30,000 feet."

Prayer Service Draws Many At Fort Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 30.—For the past few weeks soldiers in the 176th Infantry, one of Virginia's regiments in the Twenty-ninth Division, have been holding a prayer meeting each Wednesday with good attendance.

The service takes place in the regimental recreation hall. Various regimental chaplains and Lieut. Col. Frederick C. Reynolds, division chaplain, have been among the speakers.

Publish Own Paper

The Twenty-ninth Division is now publishing its own weekly newspaper. It is the "chin strap," a four-page publication sponsored by the division's post exchange council and edited by Capt. Francis E. Lutz, public relations officer.

Until this week a paper with the same name has been published by private owners, with the division publications department cooperating in news gathering.

Some old timers may rub their eyes and wonder if they have wandered off the reservation—but the army hasn't kept Private Burdette Cogar of the 115th infantry from plying his art of landscape specialist.

To have a place to entertain the girl friend and family Cogar is building a rock garden with lily pond and gold fish pool—improvised by use of an old bath tub.

Then a few benches, surrounded by a rustic fence—all for a cost of $8. "In civilian life we couldn't match it under $200," Cogar declares.

They Travel by Night

Units of the 176th Field Artillery, Pittsburgh Regiment in the Twenty-ninth Division, held a series of night road marches to help make up time to be lost over the Memorial Day holiday.

The entire combat personnel of the regiment participated in the first two night marches, in which long convoys of command cars and trucks were tested on wide, improved roads, then plowed through deep sand pits and bumped along rocky trails in deeply wooded sections of Fort Meade.

Only when operating on main highways were drivers permitted to use regular headlamps.

More S. and W. Workers Walk Out, Union Agent Says

More workers from the S & W Cafeteria have joined the walkout there, Jack Mink, union representative, reported last night. Nearly all of the production workers—many of whom remained at work for some time after the strike began—have walked out now, and are picketing the building, he said.

"We are absolutely determined to stay out until the employer meets our demand," he said. Picketing is continuing, Mink said, adding that the strikers' morale was still high. There are no conferences or meetings scheduled this week, and the deadlock continues.

The A. F. of L.-C. I. O. dispute at Indianhead, Md., is still at a standstill, John Locher, A. F. of L. spokesman, reported last night, with no let up in view. A. F. L. workmen walked out on their defense housing jobs because of the presence of C. I. O. workmen on two jobs.

Richmond, Va., Goes All-Out For Defense

By Warren Duffee.
United Press Staff Writer

Richmond, Va., May 30.—Bankers and bootblacks kicked in alike for national defense today as Richmonders donated everything from artificial legs to cocktail shakers in a city-wide aluminum collection experiment.

All over the metropolitan area, from swank manors in quiet Westhampton to dingy hovels across the river, pots and pans and percolators showered in on collection centers at schools and fire stations.

One anonymous man gave four artificial legs, ranging in size from one fitted when he first lost his leg as a child to another limb discarded only recently. He walked into a neighborhood fire house with a fifth limb and donated the other four.

Col. Robert Barton, chairman of the Richmond regional defense council and director of the "sample sacrifice" drive, said tonight he was "greatly encouraged" by the first day's yield of used, unneeded aluminum.

Everett Wilson, OPM consultant observing the campaign, said he was "amazed" at the number of cocktail shakers that came in. Too, he said the volume of articles brought by school children was surprisingly large.

The five-day experiment is being conducted also at Madison, Wis. OPM officials hope it will show whether similar campaigns in all cities will be worthwhile.

Almost everybody gave something. Saucepans and percolators topped the list. One vacuum cleaner was reported.

Beach-bound vacationists dropped their donations at fire stations on their way out of town.

Among early donations were two aluminum treads from the wings of a World War bomber. They had been the prized souvenirs of a veteran officer.

The city government donated all broken parking meters and unused alarm boxes. From the State came discarded highway markers.

Trucks will collect the aluminum Monday and pile it on a vacant lot for estimating. Tuesday, Boy and Girl Scouts will "ring every doorbell" in a last-day roundup. It was not known yet how many planes the donated aluminum would build.

New ABC Code Goes Into Effect

New regulations governing the sale and advertising of alcoholic beverages became effective at 12:01 a. m. today.

Promulgated by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board following a survey of local conditions, the new rules especially affect package-goods dealers. Liquor stores must now close at 10 p. m., except on Saturdays and days preceding legal holidays, when they may remain open until midnight.

Dealers also are prohibited from advertising the prices of beverages in their windows. Further, flashing electric signs bearing the name of the merchant or his products are banned. Dealers are given 120 days to remove existing signs of this type.

U. S. Can Build 1,024 Ships By End of '43

The United States' present merchant marine program, calling for construction of about 765 ships, can be expanded in present shipyards and ways and in those now being built, to produce an additional 259 vessels, to be delivered before the end of 1943, it was learned yesterday.

Maritime Commission officials explained that the estimate was the result of a survey of unused capacity. They said that while all available space this year and almost all available in 1942 would be filled by ships already planned for, there were still some "holes" in 1943.

They added that there was no particular point at this time to let contracts for the additional ships, since no work could be done on them for some time, until space was cleared. However, it was assumed that with the continuation of the emergency, the 259 vessels would be ordered as soon as there were facilities available to work on them.

Program of 1,024 Ships

With this addition, the total program would call for about 1,024 ships to be delivered between now and the end of 1943. These would be built in existing private shipyards and on the 103 was now being constructed for the Maritime Commission.

Now contracted for or under construction are 312 "ugly duckling" ships, 195 to be built under lease-lend funds, 112 on the Maritime Commission's previous long-range program, 60 for direct British account, and 86 for private account.

Present plans call for delivery of between 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 tons deadweight of new shipping this year, and from 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 in 1942. With the use of all facilities, the 1943 total would range well above 5,000,000 tons, it was indicated. The 1943 rate, plus British building, would more than equal the present rate of British sinkings, it was pointed out.

Few U. S. Supplies Lost

It was stated by the Associated Press, meanwhile, that apparently authentic reports had reached Congress that only 28 ships loaded with war supplies in United States ports have been sunk en route to Britain since the European conflict began in September, 1939.

While no tabulation was available on the total number of such vessels to clear United States ports, interested legislators said it was safe to assume that the loss ratio of American goods thus far had been relatively small.

Sinkings listed were said to have involved some food products from South America which were transshipped at ports here. It was pointed out, however, that the sinkings do not include sea losses of equipment produced in the United States and sent to Canada for shipment from Dominion ports.

4th Suspect Held In Safe-Cracking

Detective Sergeant James Tolson last night arrested the fourth man held in connection with the $1,300 safe-cracking at the Kearney Motor Co. on April 26.

William W. Boehman, 35, of 2812 Douglas Street Northeast, was brought from Lynchburg, Va., and was charged with housebreaking and grand larceny. Also charged and awaiting grand jury action are John Parker Martin, 31, and Robert L. Ray, 24, of 420 H Street Northwest, and Norman B. Hicks, 38, of 811 K Street Northeast.

Sergt. York Urges Convoys For All-Out Aid

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

One of America's most noted World War heroes yesterday said in effect to his fallen comrade, the Unknown Soldier:

"We must fight again!"

He was Sergt. Alvin C. York, honored for his capture of 132 Germans 23 years ago. He spoke his Memorial Day message at Arlington National Cemetery as Washington and the Nation, faced with a new challenge, did homage to the men who died that America might live.

York, now 53, his sandy-red hair greying, but looking as though he could still repeat his feat of taking an enemy machine nest almost single handed, said in a nationally broadcast address:

"It is our business to see that Hitler and his assassination of those rights that together constitute the American way of life is stopped—and stopped now."

York Urges Convoys

York made it plain that he believes in "all-out" aid to Great Britain, including fighting once more "to renew our lease on liberty." He urged that the United States convoy ships to Britain, if necessary.

"We must give all-out aid to England, and we must give it now," he said. "If that means we have to use convoys, then we should use them. The time is not now ripe, nor will it ever be, to compromise with Hitler, or the things he stands for."

In his mountain drawl, York referred sarcastically to Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, opponents of the Administration's foreign policy.

Denounces Isolationists

Recalling that he had risked his life for his country in the World War, York said "both the aviator and the Senator were denied that privilege, which possibly explains why they feel differently than the veterans do about this country's most pressing problems."

Denouncing isolationists both here and in Great Britain before Winston Churchill became prime minister, the burly Tennesseean told an audience crowding Arlington Amphitheater:

"I hope the day will never come when our Capital is renamed—Munich, D. C."

"I may be wrong," said York," but I doubt that the American I am now looking at, or the American 3,000 miles from here, or at any point in between is a man from whose shoulder you can continually knock chips without having him decide to fight.

"If I Am Wrong . . ."

"If I am wrong, and he is that kind of man, then let us stop making guns, and let us surrender to Hitler right now, while we can still do so on our own terms.

"The boy whose remains are in this Unknown Soldier's grave," York went on, "wouldn't recognize that kind of an American. England is fighting for her very life—for the right of her people to be free. We have always fought for that right. If we have stopped, then we owe the memory of George Washington an apology, for if we have stopped, then he wasted his time at Vally Forge.

"I, for one, prefer Congress and Parliament to Hitle's Reichstag and Stalin's Kremlin. And because we were, for a time, side by side, I know this Unknown Soldier does, too.

"We owe it to him," said York, "to renew that lease on liberty he helped us to get.

Applause Is Prolonged

"May God help us to be equal to the task."

There was prolonged applause at the close of York's brief remarks.

Earlier, in a driving rain, York placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in his capacity as aide de camp to Joseph C. Menendez, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The V. F. W. invited York to speak at the Arlington exercises.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, who also spoke in the Amphitheater, said Americans should be "prepared to fight" for the principles of Americanism if they believe in them.

James G. Yaden, president of the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation, presided. James Melton, noted tenor, sang.

The only G. A. R. veteran present was 92-year-old William F. Dorsey, past department commander. The only other surviving G. A. R. veteran from the District, John M. Kline, 94, department commander, was unable to attend.

new alert orders for volunteer fire fighters in defense production areas in other parts of the community.

Fort Dix, N. J.—Army canceled Memorial Day leaves of 14,000 soldiers without explanation and ordered them back at camp by reveille today. It was understood the men were to prepare for maneuvers in Virginia next week.

Fort Custer, Mich.—"Practice alert" ordered by commandant became realistic as sentries were increased, guards placed over water and power supply points and Battle Creek, Mich., industrial concerns mustered watchmen and special police.

San Francisco—Extra guards patrolled the waterfront and city officials issued warnings of possible sabotage efforts.

Southern California—Antiaircraft guns and Army pursuit planes were ordered to aviation plants as "tactical maneuvers." Plant rooftops were guarded with antiaircraft guns. Los Angeles Harbor ships were floodlighted. Patriotic bodies were ordered to "stand by." Armed guards were dispatched to Huntington Beach oil fields.

Seattle—Port commissioners ordered extra guards along the waterfront, and Federal authorities closed the Lake Washington ship canal locks to visitors and doubled the guard.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Extra guards dispatched to port facilities, industrial companies, public utilities plants and oil storage depots.

Baltimore—The police commissioner commanded all policemen to increase their watch and sent special guards to defense industries. Private guards at defense plants were warned to take extraordinary precautions.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Extra policemen were sent by the police commissioner to all defense industrial plants frequently for contacts with plant guards.

New England—Private and public guards increased at Fitchburg and Cambridge, Mass., plants. At Woonsocket, R. I., State guards were sworn in as special officers to watch factories.

Milan, Tenn.—The Wolf Creek ordnance plant, now under construction, was placed under augmented guard after an F. B. I warning.

Philadelphia.—The Baldwin Locomotive Works were watched closely. Two city patrol boats under orders to watch for any sabotage aboard vessels or wharves, cruised the Delaware River. A special guard was placed on watch beneath the western end of the Delaware River Bridge, linking Philadelphia and Camden.

Soldiers Lose Tent Camp To 4-H Club

Service men visiting the Capital on week-end leaves may no longer find lodgings at the tent camp on the South Monument grounds. The encampment, it was announced yesterday, has been turned back to the Department of Agriculture to be placed in readiness for the 4-H Club conclave the second week in June.

The week-end influx of uniformed men from nearby Army posts will be housed as usual at the George Washington University gymnasium, 2010 H Stret Northwest and the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, Eleventh and L Streets Northwest.

Because of the holiday leave most of the soldiers at Meade and nearby camps went to their homes instead of coming to the Capital for sightseeing.

Both the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club, with a capacity of 160 and the G. W. gym which accommodates approximately 100 men, reported that past weekends have seen their facilities well used but not overtaxed.

Meanwhile, Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of health, welfare and related defense activities for the Government, charged that a "very serious situation" exists here because of the concentration of armed forces at camps around the city.

"The result is," he said, "that on weekend nights and even other times, we find soldiers and other service men forced to sleep on floors of available quarters in town and other very undesirable and deplorable conditions."

He declined to comment further on "the undesirable and deplorable conditions," but said he would have "plenty to say later."

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, said prostitution has shown a great increase in Washington since the influx of service men and both his agency and the police are attempting to control the spread.

"Solicitation on the streets, especially of men in uniform, is more noticeable now than ever before," Everett said.

For the "sake of their health," he urged service men to ignore solicitations.

Sheriff Breaks Up Bund Camp Rally

Andover, N. J., May 30 (AP).—Sheriff Denton J. Quick and deputies broke up a meeting of 100 persons at the German-American Bund's huge Camp Nordland today, seized pamphlets, swastikas and pictures of Adolf Hitler, then warned no further gatherings could be held.

Quick said he acted under "authorization and direction" of State Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

Quick arrested Paul Huissel, 38, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., when he tore up a letter written in German. Quick said it was "very valuable."

Turntables Are Installed At Airport

Washington National Airport has been equipped with six-foot iron turntables—an adaptation of the familiar railroad device—so that giant air transports may be turned completely around without danger of strain to landing gears, the Civil Aeronautics Administration announced yesterday.

The turntables, installed at 12 stations along the semicircular loading ramp in front of the Terminal Building, are cupped in the center to hold one wheel of the plane. The saucer-like contrivances are mounted at the circumference on a steel track which rests on 16 rollers and these rest on a supporting circular track below.

The pilot operates the turntable by placing the plane's wheel in the center of the saucer, locking it with his foot brake and swinging the plane around into position for loading by using his opposite wing motor.

"The service pits and turntables are the result of many months of study by airport designers, during which time they considered scores of plain and fancy ideas for handling the air traveling public," the administration said, adding that "none of the tricky loading schemes offered convenience and economy and year-after-year usefulness."

Opening of the airport, long delayed, is now expected to take place "sometime next month," the administration reported.

democratic rights of American workers."

Then the board sent its sharp wire quoted above.

Behind the board's action, it was inferred, was the belief that the union members themselves would heed the plea to return to camps and mills, even over the opposition of union leaders, in the light of the President's appeal Tuesday night.

A board spokesman declined to indicate what the next step would be if the workers rejected the proposals. He pointed out that the recommendations had been unanimously approved by the board panel considering the case, including John Brophy and Clinton Golden, high C. I. O. officials on the panel.

Orton and Koivunen's wire to the board indicated by its sharp language that peace prospects were not likely. They charged that "the Mediation Board took as their recommendations to our membership the very proposals of the employers which we have shown to be grossly unfair and definite discrimination against one group of workers. The loyal workmen of the International Woodworkers of America, now on strike, seriously question the patriotism of lumber operators who answer the needs of national defense by raising the price of lumber and attempting to destroy the organization of workers in the lumbering industry."

U. S. Can Build More Bombers Than Rivals, Says Maj. Fleet

(Editor's note—Maj. R. H. Fleet, known universally in aviation as "Rube," is one of the founders of the post-World War United States aircraft industry. In this article, last of a series by governmental and industrial aviation leaders, he gives his reasons for his claim that this country can build planes better and faster than any rival.)

By Maj. R. H. Fleet,
President, Consolidated Aircraft Corporation.

San Diego, Calif., May 30 (The Special News Service).—Whether it's mouse traps or bombers, the United State can build them better—and faster.

Not long ago an Eastern executive who was going through the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation plant summed the whole thing up in a few words. After looking over our vast shop building where thousands of men are turning out parts of all shapes and sizes for our four-motored long-range bombers and our naval patrol planes, this observer said:

"To think that all those little parts somehow will get together and fly away tomorrow—that's what gets me."

The United States cannot be topped in the production of huge bombers for the simple reason that the United States never has been topped in the mass production of anything.

Growing-Pain Period Over

Naturally we had to pass through the period of growing pains in the aircraft industry, just as we passed through that period in the automotive industry, but I firmly believe we are out of the woods now.

There have been a few vociferous critics of our Nation's defense production program. They point with annoyed envy to Nazi and Fascist production and ask us why we ever allowed ourselves to fall behind in the manufacture of planes, guns and ammunition.

My answer to these who are probably not worthy of an answer is that the United States, as a government and as a people, is basically a peaceful nation. The ideals upon which our country was founded and the principles upon which we function are not those which require military aircraft, guns and ammunition to further or sustain.

But I can safely tell these critics, speaking not only for Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, but for the Nation's aircraft industry, that once these peaceful ideals and principles are threatened no nation or group of nations can pace our preparation to defend them.

Bombers Had to Be Standardized

This war has caused a complete reemphasizing of the importance of aircraft. Planes have been designed and are being designed to operate effectively in practically every phase of combat. The speed, range and fighting power of the individual models is little short of miraculous.

However, it was realized early in our defense planning that United States bombers (the real basis of any air force) would have to be standardized and produced in tremendous numbers in order to achieve the highest degree of effectiveness.

The United States Army Air Corps, after a period of intense study and testing, settled upon the Consolidated B-24 design as one which involved the best all-around principles for mass production.

In order to achieve the maximum speed of production, the Army is setting up an interindustry network through which B-24 parts will be manufactured by the Ford Motor Co. in Ypsilanti, Mich., and shipped to a Consolidated-operated assembly plant at Fort Worth, Tex., and a Douglas-operated assembly plant at Tulsa, Okla., for final assemblage.

This set-up is another example signifying the versatility of United States industry. It doesn't make any difference whether its mouse traps or bombers.

Winant Arrives In U. S. to Report To Roosevelt, Hull

New York, May 30 (AP).—United States Ambassador John G. Winant arrived from Lisbon today on the Yankee clipper to report to President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull on the war situation. He declined to comment on conditions in Britain.

The Ambassador indicated he would see Secretary Hull first and then the President, but said he did not know when he would do so.

(At Hyde Park, N. Y., where President Roosevelt is spending the Memorial Day weekend, a secretary said it was unlikely the Chief Executive would see the Ambassador until his return to Washington Tuesday unless an earlier conference seemed desirable.)

Winant disclosed he had listened in London to the President's "great" speech in which he declared an unlimited emergency.

Milk For Children

At a time when the Nation is taking stock of its strength, the existence of surplus milk on one hand and undernourished children on the other is a national reproach. That is why The Post has taken the initiative on its news pages in pointing out how this dilemma can be overcome through machinery that is already in operation here or in other cities. We hope that every reader is finding time, despite the banner headlines on battles and emergency defense moves, to follow our campaign to obtain milk for low-income families. There is no excuse for the present meager consumption of milk in the homes of the poor—for the fact is that thousands of undernourished children are without this essential food. The policy of offering 5-cent milk to needy families is well established, but that policy must be rendered effective by greatly broadening the group to which 5-cent milk is distributed.

Milk at a cent a glass, moreover, is being supplied to school children of several cities. Dr. Ruhland's report to the House District Appropriations Subcomtee on Washington's poor health record should be sufficient to indicate the need for a similar program here. The urgency of such a program can be measured only in terms of blighted lives. There are many items in the day's news that are more exciting and more interesting than the present shortage of milk in the homes of the poor. But there are not many things that are more important than adequate nutrition for the citizens of tomorrow. Mr. Gerald G. Gross' articles, which are appearing in The Post every day, are an illuminating expose of a wasted opportunity.

It Can Be Devalued

By a vote of 226 to 138 the House has passed a bill to extend for two years the President's power to devalue the dollar and to operate the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. In doing so it ignored the recommendations of the Federal Reserve authorities who in a memorandum to Congress some months ago urged repeal of the power to devalue. Of course, any valid arguments in favor of continuing the power to devalue—if there ever were any—have long since disappeared. That was tacitly admitted by Secretary Morgenthau when he asserted that the Administration has no present desire or intention to alter the gold value of the dollar. Why, then, should the Administration cling to a power which is not to be used, especially when the possession of that power gives rise to uneasiness?

As a matter of fact, inflationary dangers menace us from many sides—and probably the least of these is the threat of further dollar devaluation. Curiously enough, the minority members of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, who opposed continuation of the power to devalue the dollar on the ground that it is a device to inflate the currency, had an inflationary proposal of their own to offer. They wished to take $1,800,000,000 of the gold increment accruing to the Treasury at the time the dollar was devalued and use it to help defray current expenditures on defense. But this gold was released only by "writing up" the value of our gold holdings in dollars. The spending of a gold profit so obtained would inflate the currency quite as effectively as the issuance of an equal amount of fiat paper money. So the House at least approved the lesser of two evils in voting for extension of the power to devalue, with the understanding that it would not be used. As for the gold profit that would be left in Secretary Morgenthau's hands, he believes that $200,000,000 will be enough for stabilization operations and the remaining $1,800,000,000 he regards as a "nest egg" held in trust for the American people.

Pointer On Taxes

Chief criticism of the Treasury's excess profits tax program relates not to the proposed changes in method, which we discussed yesterday, but to its effort to obtain such a disproportionately large amount of new revenue from taxation of industry. The tax burden should be spread over a larger area if it is to yield maximum revenues and not act as a brake on industrial enterprise. The most trenchant criticism of the program comes from L. H. Parker, former chief of staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. He pleads for a more gradual increase in the levies on corporate profits on the ground that contemplated increases would seriously deplete working capital of many companies, "endanger their corporate health and life," and "cripple their future ability to pay substantial taxes." The criticism is worth pondering.

Pepper's Resolution

Senator Pepper was ill-advised in trying to obtain from his colleagues in the Senate a vote of confidence in President Roosevelt and the foreign policy he outlined in his address of Tuesday night. If the resolution had been voted, it would have constituted only an expression of sentiment. What is far more important, it might have been regarded as a precedent for Congressional interference with executive responsibilities. For if Congress should make a practice of voting confidence in the President, the time would almost certainly come when it would attempt to tie our governmental system into knots by voting a lack of confidence in the President.

It was well, then, that Chairman George of the Foreign Relations Committee succeeded in diverting the Pepper resolution to "the table," where it may properly be buried among thousands of forgotten documents. That action was probably satisfactory to the majority of Senators. But the reasoning back of it may well be examined. Senator George opposed consideration of the measure on the ground that it "would precipitate an unnecessary and a most regrettable debate at this time." The Senate might have wasted several days discussing our foreign policy without any germane legislation before it. Such a debate could have served only to magnify the discord between the majority and minority groups in Congress on this vital issue.

There is an even more important reason, however, for sidetracking the Pepper resolution, and that reason might well have been amplified on the Senate floor. The President is not responsible to the Senate for his utterances or his official conduct. Rather he is responsible to the people who elected him. Under a parliamentary form of government Mr. Pepper's move would have been quite appropriate. But it is a mistake to attempt to inject such procedure into our Government of divided powers where it is wholly out of place.

In effect Congress has already voted its confidence in the Administration's foreign policy by enacting extensive legislation to support it. There is every reason to believe that it will follow through in supporting that policy when new measures are laid before it. In the meantime there would be nothing to gain and much to lose through frantic debate on an address that proposed no legislation. The Senate has enough work of its own in these critical days without wasting its energy on issues that are outside its legislative sphere. At no time, moreover, should it essay the dangerous task of passing judgment upon the quality or rightness of Presidential speeches.

Oil Shortage

By now it is depressingly clear that the Maritime Commission's withdrawal of intercoastal tankers for shuttle service between this country and Britain is going to work considerable hardship on American consumers. For such tankers, it is reported, carry over 90 per cent of the oil used on the Atlantic seaboard—nearly half the United States market for motor fuel. Since American shipyards cannot possibly turn out tankers fast enough to compensate for the 50 which are being shifted to transatlantic service, consumers are faced with two alternatives. Either oil will have to reach the Eastern market via rail, or be stored until the tanker situation is relieved. Actually there are not enough railroad tank cars to meet the emergency, so the consumer may have to resign himself to some form of oil rationing, as Secretary Ickes has intimated.

On the face of it, this impasse would be ridiculous, were it not so serious. The United States produces about 60 per cent of the world's oil supply, and for several years the American oil industry has suffered from overproduction. Yet now, when the country can use oil in almost unprecedented quantities, it cannot be delivered at market. This oil bottleneck is but one phase of the larger transport bottleneck which has already created trouble, notably in steel deliveries. Because it hits the consumer directly, affecting his use of gasoline, furnace oil, and so on, the protests already reported as registered in Washington may become healthy yowls before long. In any case, there appears no immediate palliative.

Power Pools

An unprecedented drought in the Southeastern States, combined with the extraordinary power needs of defense industries such as aluminum and steel, has had one unexpectedly happy result. It has brought about a voluntary pooling of electric power resources controlled by the TVA and by private companies over a vast area. Such voluntary pooling within power districts was authorized by law some years ago but had never been carried out.

While the present cooperative arrangement arises out of a regional emergency, it has obvious advantages which can hardly fail to have a profound effect upon future power developments. For if Federal and private power systems in one part of the country can successfully cooperate to assure a continuous power supply for defense production, what is to hinder similar joint action in other parts of the country? And if such cooperation is feasible in times of emergency, will it not also be possible in normal times?

Regional power conferences are scheduled to be held shortly in various cities on the Atlantic Seaboard, the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West, with representatives of the Government, the public and the private electric utilities participating. Their immediate concern is the adequacy of power supply in relation to national defense, but adequacy depends largely upon efficient utilization. So it seems safe to predict that we shall be hearing a good deal more in the days to come about the benefits of power pooling and less and less about the rivalries of public and privately owned utilities.

Squeeze Play

The Federal Government has bought about a score of Douglas and Lockheed transport planes which it proposes to place in service on South American airways in competition with Axis-controlled lines. There is no subterfuge about the move. It is clearly intended to freeze out German and Italian lines and to do so in a hurry. President Roosevelt has allocated $8,000,000 from his special defense fund, and a bill is now before Congress which seeks authorization for the RFC to provide additional funds for the same purpose. Moreover, the President is reported to have asked the OPM to see that orders for planes and equipment be handled expeditiously.

There are many reasons for such haste. Some of the Axis lines have airfields only three or four hours away from the Panama Canal. One German-owned line in northern South America, it is claimed, has built a phenomenally well-equipped airfield, complete with underground hangars and camouflage. And there have been numerous reports of Axis-owned commercial planes acting as spotters at sea for Axis vessels. Nazi and Italian economic penetration in South America requires patient, long-range combative tactics on the part of this country. But flagrant threats to the Canal call for instant action. It is reassuring, therefore, to learn that some of our neighbors to the south are already considering the cancellation of the airline franchises of German and Italian dominated services.

Recently it was pointed out here that the Axis services are a political instrumentality, subsidized of course, and aiming at the eventual domination of the southern continent. When the new American air service moves in, it should be made abundantly clear to the inhabitants of the countries concerned that they are not being confronted with the substitution of one imperialism for another. The point is an important one, and certain to crop up in the minds of those who are still dubious of Uncle Sam's intentions in Latin America.

On Guard

This weekend we are confronted by striking evidence of preparedness on a nationally integrated scale. From coast to coast the armed forces, alert to threats of sabotage, are taking special precautions to safeguard defense work and military installations. The more obvious measures have already been made public. Holiday leaves have been canceled—to the disappointment of those concerned. Extra guards have been posted in navy yards and around key industrial plants. In the Los Angeles area troops have moved into aircraft factories. Navy detachments are patrolling Los Angeles harbor and have set up protective barriers. From the viewpoint of the Army and Navy the emergency has been "unlimited" for some time, and rightly so, considering the burden of responsibility which rests upon the services.

In the past, both services have frequently been loath even to hint at the character of protective measures which have been taken from time to time. In this case disclosure should serve two purposes. It should warn would-be saboteurs and Fifth Columnists that they will be dealt with summarily, if they attempt in any way to impede the defense effort. And it should arouse the public to a greater awareness of this cardinal principle: before the Nation can successfully resist a foreign foe, it must be ready to quell any possible attack from within.

OLD MEN IN SPRING

Always the old men walk in spring
Beside the lake, the park,
The first to see the blossoming
Of fire against the dark
And twisted boughs, the earliest green;
And they can tell you where
The loveliest blooms light up the trees
Of cherry, peach, or pear.

The children do not care at all
Playing at run-sheep-run,
Whether the boughs are bare or green,
So eager at their fun,
And they will pause and laugh to see
An old man bent and grey
Who stops to pluck a single bloom,
And carry it away.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Of Aliens

I concur in principle in the President's address of last evening in which he proclaimed a national emergency. Many of our citizens believe that the Government should provide the maximum of defense in order to be ready for any invasion and in order to respond to any extreme measures taken anywhere against us by potential adversaries.

As a means of restricting hysteria, I believe that the right of free speech, free assemblage and of free press should be accorded only to American citizens. Aliens who seek our hospitality should have no right to create disturbances in this country through the propagation of their ideas either for or against the totalitarian states.

If we Americans want to become hysterical, that is our right, although it is undesirable. However, we should not accord that right to aliens who ask our hospitality after having been expelled from their own country or after having left it for a better environment.

LUIGI CRISCUOLO.
New York City, May 27.

100% Americans

The country must curb these strikes which are so effectively hindering the defense program. It must take in hand the Fifth Columnists, bundists and communists and the sooner the mouths of isolationists—those fellows who would go into a hole and carry their country with them—are closed the better.

We need to be 100 per cent Americans now and that means liberty not only for ourselves, but for all the world.

A. B. CANNADY.

Parity Payments

It is a little difficult to understand how Congress and the Administration at Washington can have fallen away so far from the ideals of Jeffersonian democracy. What right has Congress to appropriate $459,000,000 of the people's money for "parity payments" to American farmers? It will be remembered that President Cleveland vetoed an appropriation of $25,000 to farmers who had had bad crops, because such use of the people's money would be unconstitutional and because it was the province of the people to support the Government but not the province of the Government to support the people. There are many other classes in the country less fortunate than the farmers and consequently more entitled to the charity of a paternalistic Government. The European war has taken our attention away from domestic problems, in that way permitting the introduction of measures which are destructive to our own form of Government. The one positive principle which must be insisted upon is that there shall be equal opportunities for all with special privileges to none. Specifically all farm subsidies must be canceled, the protective tariff must be repealed, and such class legislation as the National Labor Relations Act must be canceled.

HENRY WARE ALLEN,
Wichita, Kan., May 26.

Walt Whitman, Poet Of Democracy

Today is his birthday. Born May 31, 1819.

In these turbulent and tragic times when democracy is challenged, the name of Walt Whitman is remembered—Whitman, apostle of virile democracy as elaborated in his book, "Leaves of Grass."

He seems very close to us. For a number of years Whitman lived in Washington and loved Washington—a marked and picturesque figure, strolling leisurely through our streets and environs. Of Dutch-English stock his people settled in Connecticut in 1685. Later, the family moved to West Hill, N. J. Here Whitman spent his boyhood days.

With robust body, comeliness of person, a happy blend of character inherited family traits are marked: Strong will, slow of passion, temperate in speech, generous, tolerant by nature, simple in contacts. His schooling was meager. In after years, books, observations, introspection evolved to generous and profound culture. Frequently a dreamer, he seemed to be drifting casually through life's episodes.

"Leaves of Grass," his only book, grew through many revisions. In this book, breadth and brawn were his meat. Yet, as poet, exquisite lyricism sometimes appears, surprisingly sensitive and appealing. "Leave of Grass," prophetic in substance, with facets of grandeur and ruggedness—America the symbol of broad democracy bound together with other peoples in love, compassion, solidarity.

Individualism is vitalized, friendship glorified, woman man's equal, sex unconventionally treated, death a friend to be welcomed. Of all these subjects Whitman seems to speak beyond normal vision. His words are hammer-strokes. Perfume of the drawing-room is not in his writing. Mellifluous and rippling flow of surface—cadence rarely appears.

In Civil War times, in 1862, Whitman came to Washington to nurse a wounded brother. Through contacts he was tremendously gripped by the suffering and loneliness of other soldiers, and resolved to give them time and energy. For three years, with exalted helpfulness and aroused compassion, he moved daily among them. More than 80,000 beds were visited.

With refreshing bath to start the day, in immaculate dress, a flower in his buttonhole, a haversack inclosing immediate needs, on strong shoulders, he moved happily among the wounded, stimulating, tenderly encouraging, writing their letters and talking of home and friends. One can understand how he was awaited and loved. Such personal devotion and broad humanitarianism would suggest an episode unique in the annals of America—"the most profound moments of my life," Whitman writes.

Whitman, a rover, lived in Washington often in lodging houses, sometimes with friends. Through investigation, four of these modest homes have been noted, each dimly remembered, none directly marked by a tablet. The placing of such a tablet by one of our literary societies might be suggested as filling a need and giving distinction to a treasured American writer.

One house may be mentioned—1407 L Street Northwest, near Vermont Avenue. Near this locality Whitman frequently saw Lincoln driving down Vermont Avenue toward the White House, his carriage surrounded by clattering cavalrymen. The poet mentions the look of profound sadness in Lincoln's face unportrayed in any portrait.

In Camden, N. J., Walt Whitman, paralyzed from soldier work, yet active in mind, continued to revise "Leaves of Grass." His fame had crossed the waters. Many celebrities from afar—Edward Carpenter, Oscar Wilde, John Burroughs, John Addington, Symonds—visited him to felicitate the writer of "Leaves of Grass," profound book of democracy and freedom, stabilizing life, love, precious friendship.

OTTO TORNEY SIMON.

The President's Speech

President Roosevelt has again reaffirmed our country's policy. His is a consistent stand for the rights of men, free or enslaved, in this land or elsewhere.

There is only one thing for the rest of us to do: Back him up in every move he makes—with our strength, our courage, our cash and our prayers. The President is an American whose first interest is that of his fellow Americans and I am completely on his side.

Some have honestly differed with him during recent months, on matters of policy and methods of action. This is now all beside the point if they accept his invitation to become part of a united front "from this moment onward."

There is a big job to be done. Mass production of inspired objections to this, and "yes, buts" to that, serves no useful purpose. Mass production of defense tools—guns, planes, ships—is now the main task.

It is time, as we say down in my native Texas, to form a posse to police the seas.

A. W. VON STRUVE.
Alexandria, Va., May 28.

The President's address of the 27th was a ringing assurance that our liberty, our freedom to worship as we please, and our continued freedom to travel whenever and wherever we like on the high seas shall not perish, but shall march on, as our founding fathers proposed, fought for and established.

Yes, liberty everywhere is on trial as never before in the history of all the passing centuries. Today the world rides on the crest of a hurricane of war, with threats of slavery to millions of people everywhere. I am glad that the President proposed a national defense so complete, so strong that no enemy will ever successfully penetrate here and that he will never countenance a Hitleresque or slave-established America.

Liberty is too precious, too blessed, too dear, and is not to be risked. It must march on, it must endure forever. Who is there so bold who would challenge its safety, or its continuance, or barter it for any other type of government.

We need not fear that thinking people will ever countenance perpetual slavery, or that God will sanction the passing of liberty from the face of the earth. Or that America will retreat.

Of Pickets

It is clear to me that the counter-picket who marches daily in front of the White House is over fighting age. I am 20 years old and have participated in the American Peace Mobilization's picketing frequently.

I am picketing because I can see the war drive of the Roosevelts, Peppers, Knoxes, Stimsons & Co. I refuse to believe that our first line of defense is imperial England. Our first line of defense is in the aiding of the share-cropper in the South, in the abolishment of the poll tax, in the abolishment of Jim Crow, in the ending of discrimination of all types, in the passage of youth-aid legislation and in the passage of pro-labor legislation.

Whole-Hearted Support

The President's declaration of an unlimited national emergency if exercised to its greatest possibilities can throw the full weight of the man power and national resources of this great Nation into the struggle with the Nazis which can tip the scales in favor of the democracies. But no half-hearted measures can bring victory. All political and trade-union interests must be made subservient to the preservation of this Nation.

The Post Impressionist

Mulberry Street

Story has it that Poe wrote his immortal "The Raven" 'neath one of the lampposts on Mulberry Street. Looking at that somewhat narrow, winding street in downtown New York one would not at all wonder that this was probably so. There is a certain quaint, poetic quality about Mulberry Street. It is that intangible something transported from the Continent of Europe, with yet an American tinge and atmosphere about it all. For Mulberry Street is the hub of New York's own little Italy.

My own memories of Mulberry Street go back to a residence there of about two years. During that time I lived in a neatly furnished room in a brown-stoned little apartment house. The Senco Paper Company, which offered me employment, was several blocks away, and that short walk to and from work constituted my sole daily exercise. Indeed, there was something about Mulberry Street which inspired one to a hibernating laziness, a sense of serenity out of which one would not want to exert oneself. Not that the street itself was quiet or dull. Indeed, there were times when Mulberry Street was a milling, noisy place full of Italians and Americans, chiefly peddlers and small-time merchants and their wives, sweethearts and children. Here and there was a sooty-looking garage and in one spot even an imposing bank building looked down at you.

Mr. Senco, my boss, was a lusty Italian of stocky build and aggressive nature. He could be kind at times, though, and at no time did he show it more than when his comparatively delicate-looking wife would enter the place to talk to him.

"Yes, dear," he would address her, and would then become tenderly voluble in his accented English. All this often occurred while he and his underlings were busy with their respective tasks. My own duties were both in the office and on the outside, and I had the opportunity of coming in contact with a host of little Italy's interesting population.

It was from the vantage point of my so-called one-room apartment, however, that I had an even greater opportunity of meeting with Mulberry Street's characters. There was, for one, that strange Italian bachelor located on the floor below me. He was a hermit-like, beetle-browed fellow who had a strange habit of putting on a phonograph record of "The Moon Comes Over the Mountain" and playing it ad nauseam. When some neighbor would complain, this great music lover would mince no language in his defiance.

"I kanna play ma record all I wanta," he would end up in a decisive tone. He would slam his door and within a few minutes his screeching phonograph needle would again be at work on the romantic "The Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

I found out soon enough that the poor fellow was at work on some invention which he had taken into his head. After several years' labor, his invention had not as yet materialized. Perhaps that accounts for his eccentricities. Or maybe it was his loneliness. Anyway, that record seemed to be his only solace and his only companion.

Someone who was very much akin to this recluse was a girl who lived on the same floor as I did. Anna was her name, but among the "normal" in the apartment house, we knew her as "Mad Anna." Anna was very pleasant to look at—dark, finely chiseled features, long black hair and expressive eyes. But her antics precluded any success that her looks might otherwise have achieved.

These sad capers of Anna manifested themselves chiefly in a rapid, almost unintelligible gibberish accompanied by meaningless chuckles. These she would address to no one in particular. She always used bedsheets for curtains, and candles instead of electricity. Amidst her large outpouring of words one could frequently hear a wistful repetition of "Giuseppe." I surmised from this that Anna had suffered a disappointment in love. I could also notice a definite hypochondria in Anna. She by no means looked ill, yet she would often knock at my door in the early evening and would enter with a medicine bottle in her hand. In broken English, she would inquire from me what sort of medicine it was. I would take the easiest way out of a sorry situation by telling her it was something good. I presumed, of course, that she was given the medicine by a reliable druggist and that it was prescribed by some doctor. The prescription, I felt sure, was merely to allay her strange fears.

I often wondered how Anna lived. She had no means of support, so far as I knew. Rumor had it, however, that a wealthy aunt who had once been prominent in Little Italy had left her a pittance.

Among the more pleasant characters in my Mulberry Street domicile was a genial, elderly organ-grinder. When I went to work in the morning, I often saw him pass as he pushed his wheel-borne organ on his way to work. He was a gray-haired, healthy-looking Italian in his late fifties. His name was Giovanni. I dare say Giovanni was the most popular of all our tenants, especially with the children.

Once when I was on an errand for Mr. Senco, I saw Giovanni practicing his trade in front of some thickly populated East Side tenement houses. I stopped for a few minutes and saw Giovanni wipe perspiration from his face, as he went about collecting the small coins that dropped from the windows. He had just played "East Side, West Side" and it sounded very fine.

Giovanni recognized me and smiled.

"Hallo, Joe," he greeted me. "Whatta ya doing here?"

"I came to hear you play the organ. I like it very much."

He smiled again. Gratitude was written all over his face. I had a momentary impulse to give him a small coin, but I thought better of it.

"Thanks, Joe. Goodaby." Giovanni waved his hand at me, as he began pushing his organ away.

When I last saw Mulberry Street, it was on the day I moved to a suburb of New York. It was an early evening in spring. The fiery sun was reflected in the commonplace window panes of the shops and stores and brownstone homes. Italian men and women were on their way home from work or from shopping. The graceful sidewalk elms were sprouting forth in true spring fashion and the ancient lampposts gave forth a strange glare from the quickly disappearing sunlight. I was saying goodby to Mulberry Street for a long time to come if not forever. And it seemed to see me off in its most resplendent colors.

Labor's War Aims

By Harold J. Laski

Sees An End Of Laissez-Faire

London.

THIS WEEKEND, June 1, the annual conference of the Labor Party meets just over a year from the period when it authorized Mr. Attlee and his colleagues to enter the Churchill government. Intense conditions have made it necessary to have a three-day conference instead of five—Queens Hall, where it was originally to meet, has been bombed since the first arrangements were made—and the delegates will be mainly concerned with discussion of two reports, one on the war and one on peace, presented to them by the national executive. Since these represent, I think, the general temper of the movement as a whole, it will be useful to summarize the tendencies they represent.

The report on the war recognizes the heavy disasters that have been suffered since May, 1940. It attributes them to the abandonment of the policy of collective security in favor of the fatal attempt at appeasement. It recognizes the long, hard road that must be traveled before victory is won. But it reaffirms confidence in that victory. It insists upon the impossibility of any accommodation with Hitler and Mussolini; it asks for reaffirmation of the resolution by the Labor movement to fight on until nazism and fascism are overthrown.

THE REPORT then emphasizes the general character of the peace that must be made. Freedom and independence must be restored to the conquered peoples. International institutions and controls must be created which will prevent any government from embarking on aggression. Collective action against war as an instrument of national policy must be inherent in the structure of the international organization.

But the report is urgent that we must deal with the causes of war not less than with its symptoms. The paradox of prosperity in the midst of potential plenty, it says, is incompatible with either freedom or social democracy. It is, therefore, essential to recognize that the world is a single economic unit and to rebuild it in terms of international economic planning; and it insists that this planning must be Socialist in character if it is to benefit from scientific discovery and find conditions of enduring peace. The report comes out flatly against any attempt at restoration of what it terms the "competing anarchy of national sovereignties."

The report, on the domestic position, is essentially a reaffirmation of the full Socialist case by the Labor Party. It argues that the war can only be won by putting national interests before any private interests. It states the central principle which should inform the war effort as a combination of equity and efficiency.

By arguing that the issues of reconstruction are inseparable from the methods used to wage war, the report predicates the necessity of providing now against a recurrence of mass unemployment or distressed areas.

"THE LABOR movement does not admit," says the report, "that there is one level of claim in a period of external danger and a different level when that danger has been overcome." The report therefore insists that in health and housing, in education and land, in coal and transport "there can be no differentiation in the response to claims which are justified by the public welfare. And the more complete our national planning now over production, consumption, distribution and finance, the easier and more equitable will it be ultimately for peace."

Twenty-three years ago the Labor Party adopted its famous program, "Labor and a New Social Order," a declaration of its principles in the last great war. The present report is nothing so much as a restatement of those principles in terms of the bitter experience of what their denial means to the masses.

I know, I think, the mind of the Labor movement as well as most people. I think I summarize the effect of those documents when I say, first, that they will be accepted with enthusiasm by the conference, and, second, that they will be interpreted by the conference as instructions to the leaders of the movement to bend all their energies to protecting the frontiers of democracy from the political to the social and economic sphere.

The Labor Party goes on the record as saying that a new order is necessary to win the war; that only by building a new order as the road to victory can the harvest of peace be fully gathered.

IMPLICIT, in short, in the recommendation of its national executive to the conference, the Labor Party is recognizing that total war is revolutionary in its impact. It builds a new society by sheer compulsion of the forces it sets loose; and the Labor Party is arguing that if these forces are to make victory certain then freedom must be evaluated in the context of equality. The report is emphatic that cosmopolitan lawmaking is as fundamental internationally as abolition of privilege is fundamental nationally. There is no prospect in the Labor view, of a just world without deliberate rebuilding of the foundations.

The age of laissez-faire is finally over; private economic power can no longer be master of men's destinies. That, in the Labor view, is the central lesson of the war. And because Labor sees that the liberty that had its supreme meaning in the context of property, and liberty which has meaning only for the few is an aristocratic concept of liberty, it reaffirms its insistence—the purpose for which the Labor Party was founded—that liberty must be defined in the context of equality and that without such a definition it is a name of high sound without meaning.

Liberty in this context of equality is democratic liberty and to fight a war for this end is to open a new and, I think, a creative epoch in the history of men. For it provides an answer, indeed the only possible answer to the Nazi charge that Britain, with American help, is seeking to preserve a pluto-democratic world. It sets a challenge to the enemy which they cannot answer in terms of freedom.

Fair Enough

On Constitutional Rights

FROM TIME to time Brother Will Green, the distinguished president of the American Federation of Labor, has proclaimed his devotion to the laws and institutions of this great republic, and, assuming that he includes the courts among these fortunate institutions, I should like to introduce some interesting, if slightly confusing, evidence. It will be remembered, of course, that Mr. Green speaks ex cathedra, for it is only by virtue of his office that his utterances on any subject merit publication in the press.

The general counsel, or attorney general, so to speak, of this huge subgovernment of the United States, without whose kind permission the Nation may not defend itself against foreign foes, is Mr. Joe Padway, of Milwaukee, also known as Judge because he was once, in solemn fact, a labor judge by the political indulgence of the fallacious brothers La Follette.

Judge Padway is general counsel also for the so-called Stagehands and Movie Employes Union, or racket, whose president, Gangster George Browne, is a vice president of the A. F. of L. and a member of its executive council. Gangster Browne is currently under indictment, charged with extortion of $550,000 from the Hollywood employers over a period of years through the abuse of his power to call or refrain from calling strikes.

AS A CITIZEN and as an officer of the court, Judge Padway, of course, is required to uphold the American Constitution and the citizens' right to appeal to invoke the law for redress of wrongs. But as counsel for Gangster Browne's union he serves an organization which frankly and explicitly denies that right.

The "pledge" for new members which the union, or racket, adopted at its convention in Kansas City in 1936 says: "I solemnly pledge myself not to resort to legal proceedings against the alliance (or racket) for any grievance, but to seek my remedies within the alliance and to be bound by the decisions of its lawful tribunals." This renunciation is unqualified.

Before adoption of this repudiation of the public courts the convention was told it was applicable only to new members because "some of them might be inclined to cause us trouble." So, as will be seen, the new member may be driven into the union against his will and, upon entering, be compelled to sign away his rights to Gangster Browne, who is the judge's client, and the gangster's criminal associates, whose names are now too well known to require repeating in space more needed for other information. And, as also will be seen, Judge Padway thus achieves the remarkable feat of upholding and condemning at one and the same time the system of courts and justice before which he is licensed to practice his mysterious art.

Just before this repudiation of the courts was adopted the sea of fine, intelligent faces in the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium was gazed upon by no less a dignitary than Mr. John Possehl, the president of the operating engineers, whose vice presidents include Mr. Joe Fay, who scored a parliamentary triumph last fall in slugging Dave Dubinsky, the president of the clothing workers, for pressing a resolution to eliminate gangsters and racketeers from labor's councils—a proposal to which Mr. Fay took personal exception.

After some parliamentary tributes to the splendid character of Gangster Browne, Mr. Possehl, according to the record, condemned "the legal-minded members of the engineers," oppressed without mercy by racketeers, it might be said, "which were causing his organization much grief in the courts, being disturbed by lawsuits instituted by members."

THE AMBIGUITY of Brother Green's attorney general toward the public courts of the land and the Constitutional rights of citizens is further confused by the fact that he is general counsel for the Teamsters Union as well, an organization whose detestation of lawful procedure and constitutional rights was expressed in the May, 1940, issue of its official journal, as follows:

"There is no greater curse than to have an individual member who wants to take the local union into court when a decision is rendered against him.

"Any member taking any local or the international into court, if the local wins the case, the member should have charges preferred against him and be fined double the cost incurred by the local, including lawyers' fees, and other expenses, and until such fine is paid should be suspended and deprived of all rights and privileges of a union man."

"A strikebreakers," the lowest form of insect life, according to the union biologies, "isn't half as guilty of attempting to destroy the union as the union man who violates his obligation by rushing into court."

A standing invitation exists to Judge Padway to clarify his position as a member of Brother Green's cabinet and as an American citizen and member of the bar, sworn to uphold two conflicting concepts of a fundamental right of American citizens.

The Gallup Poll

The Gallup Poll

62% Think Germany Would Attack U. S. Within Ten Years . . . If British Lose

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 30.—That Adolf Hitler's speeches have failed to reassure Americans regarding Germany's intentions toward this country, and that a majority of Americans think a victorious Germany would eventually start a war against the United States, are facts which emerge today from a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

If Britain is defeated in the present struggle, 62 per cent of those interviewed say they think Germany and Italy will launch an attack on this country "within the next ten years."

Only 29 per cent think there would not be such an attack, and 9 per cent say they are undecided.

Whether or not the majority of American voters are right in estimating Nazi intentions as they do, the survey sheds considerable light on this country's desire to aid Britain, "even at the risk of getting into war."

The public's feeling also has great significance for America's national defense program, and for this country's efforts in consolidating the nations of the Western Hemisphere against Axis inroads.

Voters in the survey were asked:

"If Germany and Italy should defeat Britain in the present war, do you think Germany and Italy would start a war against the United States within the next ten years?"

Nationally the answers were:

Think Axis would attack	62%
Think Axis would not	29
Not decided	9

In short, among those with definite opinions the division is approximately 68 to 32.

The development of American public opinion on the whole issue of German intentions is clearly marked in successive Institute surveys over the past three years.

In the years before Adolf Hitler's rise to power it is probable that very few Americans thought of Germany as a menace to the United States. But by March, 1938, shortly after Hitler's march into Austria, the Institute found 40 persons in every 100 saying they thought the United States "would have to fight Germany again" during their lifetimes.

By the time of the Munich conference that autumn, the number expecting eventual hostilities had risen slightly. But it was not until war actually came that a majority came to expect a relatively early challenge.

The following figures show the trend of U. S. opinion since the fall of France last summer:

"If Germany and Italy should defeat Britain in the present war, do you think Germany and Italy would start a war against the United States within the next ten years?"

	Yes	No	Undecided
July, 1940	55%	34%	11%
December	60	31	9
March, 1941	61	29	10
April	62	31	7

U. S. Officials En Route Here After Survey Of Greenland

By Lloyd Lehrbas,

Associated Press Staff Writer

A report on Greenland's role as an outpost in the defenses of the Western Hemisphere will be made early next week by American officials now en route here in a Coast Guard cutter after an extensive survey of the world's largest island.

Aksel Svane, governor of southern Greenland, is also coming aboard the cutter for conferences with Hendrik de Kauffman, the Danish Minister, and State Department officials on the island's defense administration and trade.

The Battle of Greenland, in which the Nazi battleship Bismarck sank the British battle cruiser Hood, and the Nazi attacks on convoys in Greenland waters have caused officials here to speed the development of American air bases and defenses on the island.

American apprehension that the island's vulnerability and its location off the coast of Canada might make it a danger to the peace of this continent caused President Roosevelt to take it under the protection of the United States on April 10, the first anniversary of Denmark's occupation by German forces.

In his Tuesday speech, the President declared:

"Most of the supplies for Britain go by a northerly route, which comes close to Greenland and the nearby island of Iceland. Germany's heaviest attack is on that route. Nazi occupation of Iceland or bases in Greenland would bring the war close to our continental shores, because they are stepping stones to Labrador, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and the northern United States, including the great industrial centers of the North, East and Middle West."

Naval experts pointed out that Greenland bases could greatly aid Britain in solving the problem of protecting convoys across the North Atlantic.

With American naval vessels patrolling between the United States and Greenland, it was pointed out, British warships would need to shepherd merchantmen only through the German-proclaimed blockade zone, recently extended to within 3 miles of Greenland.

Bases in Greenland, it was said, would also provide facilities for the extension of American patrols—by warships or by planes—over the North Atlantic to give warning of any German submarines or surface raiders attempting to prey on merchant ships in waters of the Western Hemisphere.

Greenland airfields might also be used, it was understood, as an intermediate stop by pilots ferrying warplanes from American factories to the Royal Air Force.

Office of Transit Supplants Defense Advisory Board

By Irving Perlmeter,

Associated Press Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered creation of an Office of Transportation and thereby terminated the work of the National Defense Advisory Commission exactly a year after it first met.

Transportation was the only activity left in the commission as the fast-growing Office for Emergency Management swallowed up all of its other duties in new agencies, particularly the Office for Production Management.

The President, it was learned from authoritative sources, has approved the new agency as a planning and coordinating body designed to get maximum defense cooperation in the fields of railroad, bus, truck, pipeline, ship, airline and barge transportation.

Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington Railroad and transportation member of the Defense Commission, is expected to head the railroad division of the new agency, with someone else having experience in other transportation problems at the top of the whole setup.

These sources said flatly that the President had no intention of placing the railroads under Government operation as they were during the World War. Officials here regard the World War step a failure, and said they believe that Government-directed cooperation of the railroads under their private management can get better results.

The President took no formal step to disestablish the Defense Commission. He merely caused it to cease to exist by taking away its last function.

Budd was one of six original members who filed through a crowd of more than 100 newspapermen to enter the White House offices last Memorial Day. In his steaming-hot study that day President Roosevelt outlined the work to be done. The seventh member, Sidney Hillman, was ill.

Since then they have had an important hand in guiding $5,200,000,000 of cash expenditures, and in steering a long-term program now aggregating approximately $43,000,000,000.

The defense commission passed out because it had only advisory powers, and needed authority to act.

Dissolution started in January, when Production Member William S. Knudsen, Labor Member Sidney Hillman and Materials Member Edward R. Stettinius, jr., all went to OPM. Knudsen is director, Hillman codirector and Stettinius director of priorities.

Next Price Member Leon Henderson and Consumer Member Harriett Elliott were transferred to the newly created Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply. Henderson is administrator and Miss Elliott deputy administrator.

With hardly a ripple, the agriculture section was then transferred to the Department of Agriculture. Chester C. Davis, who was the agriculture member, had resigned to become president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

Report on Rieth Asked by Berlin Of Embassy Here

Berlin, May 30 (AP).—The German Embassy in Washington has been asked for a report on the case of Kurt Heinrich Rieth, former German Minister to Austria now held at Ellis Island, authorized sources said today, adding that no official word of his arrest had yet been received.

It was said that Rieth has had no official contact withthe Geramn government for seven years and is in the United States as a private individual on private business. He is traveling on a visa issued in Berlin by the United State consulate, it was said.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The New Bunker Hills

"We must be realistic about that word 'attack.' It can begin anywhere in the Western Hemisphere. If you wait to shoot until you see the whites of their eyes as at Bunker Hill you will never know what hit you."—President Roosevelt.)

Bunker Hill may be in Iceland—
Boston may be far at sea,
Concord Bridge may be a structure
Beyond visibility;
Distance in this war is shrinking
And it quite disturbs our sleep
To regard the North Church belfry
As upon the briny deep.

II.

Paul Revere once watched for lanterns
From a famous Charlestown shore—
But he now needs long-range glasses
That will take in Labrador;
He must watch a lot of steeples
On some Arctic stretch of land
And must look for signals flashing
From some Indian coral strand

III.

Now "the muffled oars" must cover
Lots of distance, wild and rough,
And the epic Charlestown rowboat
Must do oceangoing stuff;
Paul was once a local rider—
And we owe a lot to him,
But he now must get around more
And must teach his horse to swim!

IV.

Now he stands beside his saddle
And he wonders what to do
As he keeps an eye on Dakar
Trinidad and Suez, too;
As he waatches for new doings
With that classic "eagle search,"
He may catch a warning glimmer
From a Madagascar church.

V.

Mystic once was in New England,
But who thinks it there today?
Medford cocks now crow in Iceland
Or perhaps in Baffin Bay.
It was 1 o'clock, they tell us,
When Paul got to Lexington . .
But the journey was a land trip—
And was not an ocean run.

VI.

It was 2 o'clock at Concord—
Then a Massachusetts place—
Not a village in the Azores
Or a borough near Cape Race;
Then the flocks that Paul heard bleating
Were all flocks quite close at hand;
Never flocks in far-off Narvik

VII.

Middlesex was then nonshifting,
Not transferable each week;
It was not in midatlantic
And 'twas not in Martinique!
Distance isn't what it once was—
Now our shores, so we hear,
Can be somewhere close to China,
Crete, Suez or Finistere.

* * * *

L'ENVOI

So to wait to "see the whites of"
Hostile eyes brands you a dope—
Unless you are tensely squinting
Through a big Lick telescope;
So we give Revere the curtain
As a far outdated lad
And we shoot his horse quite blithely—
But it leaves us pretty sad!

"I call upon our loyal workmen as well as employers to merge their lesser differences."—President Roosevelt.

We can hear the cry, "Who, me?" rising from a million throats.

It is all very well to talk of pledging our lives and our honor, but it takes a man with a long memory to understand what is meant by the reference to fortunes.

The trouble is that too many Americans think of an unlimited emergency as meaning tire trouble during a weekend auto trip, a slight traffic congestion on the way to the bathing beach or a shortage of auto parking space for the hired hands.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America In Her Own Right

THE DECLARATIONS of the President, if effectively supported, will mark the beginning of the end of the process by which this country has been placed in ever-increasing danger.

LIPPMANN

Hitler's policy has been brilliantly conceived and on the whole shrewdly executed. It has been to isolate the United States by exploiting the love of peace and to encircle it by acts of which the consequences might not be visible to most of the people until it was too late to avoid them.

If the policy succeeded, the United States isolated and encircled would be asked, as the Japanese Foreign Office has made known, to disarm in the name of peace and to conform to a totalitarian world order.

THIS POLICY has very nearly succeeded. With the seizure of Norway and the defeat of France, the Nazi sea and air power was placed in a position to strike dangerously at the communications between North America and Great Britain, between Great Britain and South America, between North America and South America. This is the Battle of the Atlantic which has for its immediate object the blockade of Britain and as its consequence, if Hitler won it, the physical isolation of North America not only from Europe, but from South America.

Hitler would have won the Battle of the Atlantic if he could make it impossible for the British Isles to continue to be the fortified base of the British navy. For South America is connected strategically, as it has been historically, as in fact it is economically with southwestern Europe and northern Africa, and it cannot be defended from bases in North America alone. A Nazi victory in the Battle of the Atlantic would constitute for a long time to come, a decisive defeat of the defense of the hemisphere.

In order that the defeat should be irreparable, Hitler's policy has aimed not only at the isolation of North America but at its encirclement. This is the purpose of his Japanese treaty: this is a very important part of his purpose in driving the Vichy government into collaboration. If he could persuade us or prevent us from defeating him in the Battle of the Atlantic, there is no doubt that he would offer us a negotiated peace. In alliance with Japan and probably Russia, with France and Britain his vassals, with South America compelled to follow him, we should be offered a settlement. The principal condition of that settlement has been officially disclosed in Tokio, and it is perfectly obvious. We should be offered a settlement based upon the suspension of our armament program and the reduction of our naval power. If we refused, we should have to fight the world: if we accepted, we could no longer refuse any other conditions that were proposed to us.

OWING TO CONFUSION of counsel here, and to other causes, this policy of isolating and encircling North America has come near to success. It has come so near to success that Col. Lindbergh rests his whole case, apart from his emotional appeal, on the assertion that Hitler is victorious and that the United States should now accept the fact that it is isolated and encircled and should behave accordingly.

Hitler's calculation would have proved to be correct, and Col. Lindbergh's predictions would have been fulfilled but for the fact that both misjudged the power of Britain and both misunderstood the capacity of the American people to see that the maintenance of British-American sea power in the Atlantic is a vital interest of the United States. The miscalculation about Britain caused Col. Lindbergh to make a speech last summer taking it for granted as beyond argument that Germany had already won the war. The misunderstanding of the United States is marked by the passage of the lease-lend bill, the declarations of the President, and the placing of this country on a war footing.

WE HAVE COME to a turning point in the great conflict because, now that the decision has been taken to resist our own isolation and encirclement, it becomes our obvious policy to move towards the isolation and encirclement of Nazi Germany. This is our greatest role in the conflict. For while we can do nothing unless we make this arsenal enormously productive, and nothing unless we make sure of the control of the Atlantic Ocean, our political power—now that it has substance behind it and is not mere words—is the greatest of our weapons. It is of no value unless we produce and deliver the goods. But if we do produce and deliver the goods, our political power can and will be used to break up Hitler's alliance and bring into being the alliance which will destroy him.

THUS WE ARE now in a position to turn to the Japanese with the object of rendering impossible a war in the Pacific—a war which would be a ruinous and foolish war. This war cannot be averted by weakness, fear, or indecision. It can be averted by resolute action and a candid recognition of our own and of Japan's vital interests. Having made our military dispositions so that we are able to check a Japanese intervention in the World War, having reached the necessary strategical agreements with Britain, Australia, the Netherlands, and China, having taken firm control of all of our many means of economic warfare, we should open up the prospect of serious negotiation in the Far East based upon an honorable peace in the Chinese war, a new commercial treaty with us and with the Netherlands, and a political settlement, which would include Russia, based upon the liquidation of all imperialism in China—Japanese, British, and American. If the response from Japan is favorable, we should of our own free will right the wrong done to Japanese pride by placing her immigration upon a quota basis.

THERE IS GROUND for the hope and belief, judging by the things the President did not say in his address, that some such constructive policy in the Pacific is not excluded. All the world, excepting only Hitler, has much more to gain than it has to lose by a well-conducted diplomatic move to avert a war in the Pacific. And since Japan shows no signs of wishing to start such a costly war just to please Hitler, there is reason to hope that the effort can succeed.

In making the effort we shall be acting at last as a great power and in our own right—neither timidly shrinking from our responsibilities nor basing our action simply and solely upon the role of an auxiliary of Britain. As a great power and acting in our own right, though of course in consultation with the British Commonwealth of Nations, we can have much to say to France, and perhaps also to Spain and Portugal, that Britain alone cannot say, that the Latin countries need to hear and that they may in fact be glad to hear.

Farm Federation Demands Parity Prices Be Guaranteed

The American Farm Bureau Federation demanded yesterday that Congress forbid the Commodity Credit Corporation buying or selling farm products for less than parity prices, warning that otherwise the Nation's farmers are "headed for grave disaster."

Edward A. O'Neal, federation president, told the House Banking Committee such a prohibition would be accomplished by an amendment proposed by Representative Gore (Democrat), Tenn., to the bill authorizing expansion of the corporation's borrowing capacity from $1,400,000,000 to $4,400,000,000. The measure also would extend the life of the corporation indefinitely.

"The issue raised by the Gore amendment is very clear," said O'Neal. "That issue is whether the parity objective is to be a reality for American farmers or whether it is to be merely an illusive mirage constantly dangled before the eyes of farmers but which they are never permitted to attain.

O'Neal declared the concentration of purchasing power in the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Surplus Marketing Administration and under the lend-lease program could "make or break the market for any agricultural commodity in America."

"As things now stand the American farmer has no protection as to what the price policy of these agencies will be," O'Neal added, "with the exception of the mandatory 85 per cent parity loans which will be in effect for 1941.

"Unless such protection is provided, farmers are headed for grave disaster, which may make the farm depression which followed the other World War look small by comparison."

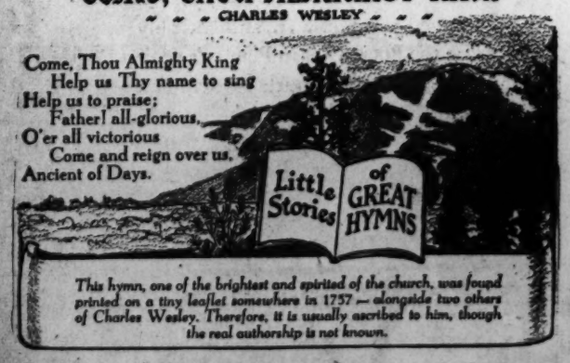
"COME, THOU ALMIGHTY KING"
CHARLES WESLEY



Come, Thou Almighty King
Help us Thy name to sing
Help us to praise;
Father! all-glorious,
O'er all victorious
Come and reign over us,
Ancient of Days.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn, one of the brightest and spirited of the church, was found printed on a tiny leaflet somewhere in 1757 — alongside two others of Charles Wesley. Therefore, it is usually ascribed to him, though the real authorship is not known.

Bible Classes' Poet Laureate Is E. M. Bryan

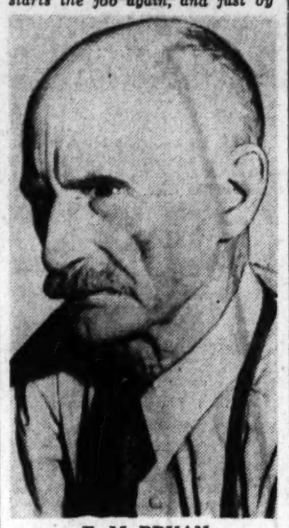
Poet laureate of Washington's Bible classmen is 75-year-old E. M. Bryan, member of St. Paul's Methodist Church and one of the charter members of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association.

Whether it's during the annual Bible Conference at Western Maryland College or in business hours at the E. M. Bryan Stationery firm he heads here, "E. M."—as he is familiary known—always has a poem on the tip of his tongue. Some is original, some is "rehashed," as he puts it.

In a lighter vein, one of his favorite "rehashed" ones is:

Under a spreading chestnut tree, the stubborn auto stands,
The smith an angry man is he, with troubl on his hands,
The car it seems to be the cause of all his woe,
He tightens a half a dozen bolts, and still the car won't go.

He sits beneath the tree to give his brains a chance to cool,
And ponders over his training at the correspondence school,
Then he starts the job again, and just by



E. M. BRYAN
. . . Poet laureate

chance 'tis seen,
The cause of all his troubles is he's out of gasoline.

Because Mrs. Miles gave birth to twin daughters on May 21 at Sibley Hospital, Washington Bible Institute Treasurer George Miles was being felicited all around at the recent annual institute dinner at the Continental Hotel. For God's "abundant grace," as he described it, George named one baby Grace Elizabeth, the other Esther Ann. A baby boy of the Miles' died about a year ago.

Capital Jews to Celebrate Shovuos Tomorrow, Monday

Shovuos—Jewish Feast of Weeks, or of the Pentecost—will be observed by followers of Judaism here tomorrow and Monday.

According to religious leaders, Shovuos was once an unpretentious holiday, but has taken on great importance during the past century because of the ceremony of confirmation which reformed Judaism has introduced.

The day of the festival is determined according to an interpretation of a passage in the Pentateuch that states the festival is to be celebrated 50 days after the offering of the "Omer," the first sheaf of the barley harvest.

Originally this offering was brought to the local sanctuary, later to the temple in Jerusalem. On the second day of Passover the counting of the days began, and this was incorporated in the daily morning prayer as a special benediction. This period between Passover and Pentecost was marked by solemnity and abstinence from pleasures and all joyous celebrations.

On the fiftieth day—hence the name Pentecost—from the beginning of the grain harvest, the wheat crop was garnered, and the second offering prepared from the new wheat was brought to the temple. As was the custom in ancient times, the occasion was marked by a festival, Shovuos.

At its inception the festival was purely an agricultural holiday. It was at a much later date that it was invested with significance by being linked with the occasion of the revelation at Sinai, the giving of the law. Traditionally the day also marks the anniversary of the death of King David.

B. and P. W. Group Goes To 'Y' Camp

Rain, Cool Weather Fail to Interrupt Plans for Holiday And Weekend

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Staff Writer

Despite the rain and cool weather, a busload of girls from the business and professional women's department of the Y. W. C. A. left the Administration Building at Seventeenth and K Streets for Kamp Kahlert at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to spend the holiday weekend.

Kahlert, on West River, Md., is the Y. W. C. A. summer camp. Before it opens and after it closes each season, its facilities are used by "Y. W." groups for weekend outings.

Miss Florence Dunlap, camp director, and Miss Peggy Cragg, senior counselor, are already established there, preparing the summer program and, with Miss Josephine Hamilton, assistant secretary of the business girls department, will have charge of the activities this weekend.

The girls will play tennis, swim if the weather warms up, and make a special trip to the bay on an old schooner.

In the party were 23 members of the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, a group from the Blue Triangle Club of the Y. W. and several girls newly-arrived in Washington to work in connection with the defense program.

Tuesday evening meetings are being held at the Y. W. C. A. weekly as "at homes" for new girls in Washington. The gatherings are on the fourth floor, where the activities of the Businesswomen's Department are conducted under Miss Edith Rieger, executive secretary of the department.

Miss Rieger and Miss Josephine Hamilton, assistant secretary, are in charge of the "at homes," assisted by Irene Keltz, Eleanor Swartz, Thelma Morris and Louise Foster, girls of the department, who act as hostesses.

The evenings include social recreation, tours through the Y. W. C. A. to acquaint the newcomers with all its facilities, and talks by persons who are specialists on Washington and what it offers in the way of recreation and education, and the cost of doing various things.

Miss Catherine Menke will preside at the third meeting next Tuesday night from 7:30 to 9:30. There was an attendance of 35 at the last one and girls who were there expected to tell others about it and increase the number next week. Many of those who attend make plans with other girls whom they meet there for playing tennis, bicycling, sightseeing and going to church, finding it an opportunity to make friends.

Among girls in the party that went to Kamp Kahlert were Miriam Byers, Phyllis Brown, Mary Bingham, Dorothy Seaton, Frances Hall, Nola Harrison, Helen Holzbach, Elizabeth Stern, Peggy Sisson, June Naylor, Dorothy Veon, Julia Sawanick, Denny King, Mollie Schlafman and Clare and Marion Brubaker.

The Xenos Club, composed of younger business girls of the Y. W. C. A., had its annual spring banquet on Wednesday evening. It wound up the winter activities and these new club officers were present: Miss Adah Sheldon, president; Miss Miriam Murray, vice president; Miss Lorraine Campion, secretary; Miss Alice Olson, treasurer; Miss Elinor Furniss, program; Miss Eleanor Wager, music; Dorothy Wallace, social service; Edith Greene, Xenos News editor (publication of the club).

Miss Rieger will leave this weekend to attend several conferences, including that in Merrie-Wood, N. C. In July Miss Rieger will go to Lochearn Clan, a camp near Ely, Vt., where she is the program director, each summer.

Hadassah Board Will Meet Tuesday

Final plans for Hadassah's spring luncheon scheduled for June 10 at the Mayflower will be made at the last board meeting of the year Tuesday at 1:30 at the Jewish Community Center. A hostess tea will follow the business session.

Mrs. Charles M. Rosenthal is chairman, and her daughter, Mrs. Philip Goldstein, is cochairman. She and Mrs. Alfred Schwartz will be at the center an hour before the meeting to issue tickets for the luncheon.

Dr. Martha Elliott and Mrs. Robert Szold will speak on the American and Palestinian child welfare programs, respectively. The proceeds of the luncheon, which will take the place of two affairs held in former years, will be devoted to Hadassah's child welfare work.

New officers also will be inducted at the luncheon, which is the closing affair of the year. Thirty-five tables already have been reserved. Special prizes given for the event include a hand-crocheted cover made by an out-of-town friend of the chapter and silver and turquoise jewelry, donated by Mrs. Louis Brandeis.

Alliance Members Will Go to Baltimore

Many Washington members of the Alliance Francaise and their friends will attend a benefit lecture to be given in Baltimore Tuesday night to aid the work of the Coordinating Council for Relief of French Prisoners of War.

The lecture is sponsored by the Alliance Francaise and the French Club of Philadelphia, which will present Andre Maurois, of the French Academy, speaking on "Souvenirs de ma Vie Litteraire." The program will be in Cadoa Hall, 118 West Franklin Street, Baltimore, at 8:30 Tuesday evening.

Baroness to Aid Benefit Fair

The benefit "country fair" to be held at Langley Park Saturday, June 14, is being brought directly to home kitchens through the herb demonstration of Baroness de Sounin, of Washington. Mrs. James Cope, chairman of the herb booth, announced yesterday that the baroness had consented to take an active part in acquainting the visitors with the uses of herbs in the home.

An authority on the subject, Baroness de Sounin is the author of a book, "I Demonstrate Herbs," which will be off the press the latter part of June. Copies of some of the unusual recipes and stories about herbs will be on sale at the booth, as well as jars of herb butter, herby vinegar, pot pourri. Many donations of potted herbs and plants have been received by Mrs. Cope, and the committee is making lavendar bags which will be sold by children at the fair.

The herb committee consists of Mrs. Dean G. Atcheson of Washington, Mrs. Frederick L. Thomas, Sandy Spring; Mrs. Lester Anderson, Silver Spring, and Baroness de Sounin. Mrs. Herbert Feis of Georgetown is also assisting. The committee met at her home Wednesday morning and completed plans for this display.

The country fair is being sponsored by the Montgomery County branch of Bundles for Britain, Inc., and the British War Relief Society of Maryland.

Pinchots Show Movies Of Trip to South Seas

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor

WANDERLUST took possession of a number of Washingtonians yesterday afternoon, and for an hour they succumbed to the urge to visit the South Seas. Boarding the good ship Mary Pinchot, they took off for a trip that almost every man and woman hopes to make some day. An hour later, the company had returned from a thrilling journey and were discussing it over the tea cups in the dining room of the Pinchot home on Rhode Island Avenue.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

The brief escape from wartime Washington was provided by former Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who entertained a few of their friends with six reels of film that recorded their South Seas trip some years ago. Watching the motion picture was as exciting an arm-chair journey as anybody ever enjoyed, and a number of those present made up their minds that, come what will, they'll take a similar trip before they die—or else . . .

There were shots of shark-infested seas, and sharks themselves; countless coral reefs, and pearl divers who lifted oysters from their coral beds deep in the sea; former cannibals who long ago had seen the error of their ways, and island dancers whose lively steps and graceful movements would do honor to the professional stage.

The most interesting scenes, however, were the ones in which Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot appeared, and particularly memorable were those in which Mrs. Pinchot, in a diving helmet, explored the bottom of the sea. Every bit as entertaining as the film itself was the running commentary given alternately by the host and hostess as the pictures flashed on the screen.

"Gifford went up ahead, and pulled me up after him," said Mrs. Pinchot, as the part of the film was unreeled showing her climbing a steep cliff that edged the sea in the Marquesa Islands.

"She went everywhere that the rest of us did," he added proudly, "and sometimes she was all for going farther than any of us dared."

'Just Like a Hollywood Set'

A lush tropical scene accented with waving palm trees against an ocean background, flashed on the screen. "We showed these films to a producer once," averred Mrs. Pinchot, "and he paid it the highest possible compliment. "Looks just like a Hollywood set," he said.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who were invited to make the South Seas journey with the Pinchots, were among those viewing the film. And now and then, as the picture was shown, the host and hostess commented: "That's what you would have seen if you had gone with us."

Later, Justice and Mrs. Stone were bewailing the fact that they had not been able to get away on the trip. The latter, incidentally, lasted nine months and included many adventures not recorded in the film.

Among those enjoying the picture were a number of children who accompanied their parents and later had ice cream and cake served up especially for them. Meanwhile, others in the company were having tea and wishing aloud that they could sail for the South Seas sometime soon.

Mrs. Frankfurter Pours Tea

Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, in a grey ensemble, and Mrs. Patrick Hill, whose wide-brimmed leghorn hat and pastel print frock was most becoming, presided at the tea table. Col. and Mrs. Frank J. Morrow said the films reminded them of Hawaii. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling were there, as were Mrs. Charles L. McNary and Mrs. William H. Smathers. Oswald Garrison Villard accompanied his daughter, Miss Dorothea Villard.

"That's just the kind of a trip I'd like to make," said Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross as the film drew to a close. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, whose husband is off on a business trip to the West, was another of those who enjoyed the film, as did Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Miss Patricia Grady, Mrs. John Rooseter, of San Francisco, and a number of others.

Diplomatic Corps Is Well Represented At Reception Given by Undersecretary And Mrs. Welles at Oxon Hill Estate

UNDER CLEARING skies, the gardens at Oxon Hill were at their loveliest when the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles received yesterday afternoon. Guests came early and stayed late—among them Ambassadors and Ministers, with their wives, until the diplomatic list was all but complete.

Early arrivals were the Peruvian Ambassador, dean of the corps, and the Turkish and Soviet Ambassadors, the latter two immediately falling into deep conversation.

A notable absence—at least I never saw a one of them—was the diplomatic representatives of the Axis powers. Not a German, Japanese or Italian was in sight.

A NOTABLE presence — a benign one—was the Secretary of State, popular Cordell Hull. Accompanied by Mrs. Hull, who was looking very slender and pretty in Navy blue, the Secretary was surrounded by friends from the moment of his arrival.

Lady Halifax, in a frock of a becoming soft shade of brown, with a matching hat and veil, sat and chatted with Mme. van Kaathoven, who was pouring coffee. Lord Halifax mingled with the crowd and someone suggested that the tall British Ambassador could be a one-man bureau of missing persons, as he could see over everyone's head.

MR. AND MRS. Welles received their guests on the spacious porch overlooking the swimming pool and garden. Mrs. Welles was stunning in a simple afternoon dress of navy, the blouse heavily embroidered in white. With it she wore a white hat.

Tea—poured to perfection by Mrs. Stanley Reed—and coffee, as well as stronger drinks, were served in the dining room, where the long table was laden with everything delicious, including strawberries and cream. Here everyone gathered when the evening grew cool.

THE LUXEMBOURG Minister and Mme. Le Gallais accompanied amiable and good-looking Prince Felix of Luxembourg to the party, and saw that he met everyone. Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, escorted attractive Mrs. Davis, who was enjoying her first party since a recent illness.

The Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin, was on hand, as were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Ray Athertons, the Larry Duggans, the Philip Bonsals and Horton Schoellkopf, who is in Washington between foreign posts.

Wandering about the flower-filled drawing rooms were most of the Latin-American diplomats. Among them were the Mexican Ambassador, accompanied by Senora de Castillo Najera, amusing Dr. Richling, Minister of Uruguay; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. De Bayle, and the counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron.

THE FRENCH Embassy was well represented by the Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye; the Counselor, Jacques Dumaine; the new Counselor and Mme. Georges-Picot; The Naval Attache, Commander Denis de Bourgoing, and his assistant, Lieut. Charles-Henri de Levis-Mirepoix. Also present was the Vicomtesse de Bourgoing, the Marquise de Levis-Mirepoix and Baroness Baeyens.

The Minister of South Africa was accompanied by Mrs. Close and the Minister of Sweden, was with Mme. Bostrom and Mme. Bostrom's brother and sister-in-law, the Swedish Councelor and Mme. Wennerberg.

The Greek Minister, with Mme. Diamantopoulos, chatted pleasantly with friends, but one could read in his face the fate of his gallant country. Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, and Mme. Fotitch came without their husbands, who don't find much time for parties.

THE NORWEGIAN Minister looked very fit and sunburned, health which, his wife said, had been acquired in Canada. The Polish Ambassador Ciechanowska sought out their hostess for a chat on the terrace, as did the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

Others I saw were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, whose hat of small white flowers was swathed in veiling; Mrs. Philip Coffin, Donna Julia Brambilla, both wearing smart silver fox jackets; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Derek Hoyer Millar, with her uncle, Charles Carroll Glover, Clarence Hewes, Pendleton Turner, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, and Senor and Senora Hugo Gouthier.

Dutch Seamen Take Over Women's Fashions

Reminiscent of the early days of the roving Dutch seamen, who plied the waters around New York in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is this spectator sports dress. The style of the dress follows the traditionally simple lines of the costumes worn by these adventurous sailors. It is made of Mallinson rayon in authentic Spinning Wheel design. This outfit and others following the same inspirational design are available in a local store.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 35, Unmarried, College Graduate, Wants To Know Where to Meet Men in Washington, and How to Hold Their Interest and Her Self Respect?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman, 35 years of age, college graduate, holding a good position with the Government. Before I came to Washington, I held several good positions in my home State,—where I had an attractive apartment and could entertain. I am habitually well dressed; love to swim, hike and ride horseback; enjoy bridge, the theater and travel (having spent more than $4,000 on trips since 1930);—and yet I can't solve my principal problem, which is: how to meet men?

Tell me, Miss Haworth, where in this city of Washington can a woman meet men? Now, don't tell me there are six women to every one man here! Maybe there are,—but of the six women, three may be too old and the other three too young to be interested in bidding for the attention of the man I would like to meet. Not that I am saying the man must be approximately 35. He could be anywhere from 30 to 50 years of age, providing he were a congenial personality. You don't meet men at church; that I know.. At least, not men in my age category. I have been to church, and the oldest unmarried men I met there were 22 or 23 years of age at most.

And here is another question: How do you engage a man's attention while keeping your self respect? Nine men out of ten expect a woman to be "fast." If they can't kiss and pet on the first or second date, they tell you to thaw out; and when they take leave of you, they say they "will see you soon,"—and that's the last you see of them. Yet I know there must be nice men around here somewhere—men holding down good jobs, men unattached and lonely, who would like to meet a companionable, well behaved woman. They might even be interested in getting married, if they could find a woman who appreciates a good home, knows how to create one, and would get a kick out of preparing good meals, keeping a spotless kitchen and being a pal to her husband.

Don't be alarmed at the candor of my statements. I have better judgment than to spring that kind of talk on a man. I would let him spring it on me instead. And getting married isn't my immediate objective. I just want men friends. I am lonesome at present. I want the kind of social life that goes hand-in-hand with having beaux. I want the kind of men friends who appreciate a wholesome woman—one who doesn't throw herself at every man who asks her for a date. Yes, I have had dates, of sorts, at scattered intervals since I have been here; but I have never solved the problem of how to sidestep "sex," and win through to friendship. Perhaps you can advise me.

B. E. K.

Social Procedure Here Same as Elsewhere

DEAR B. E. K.: To answer your last question first—it's a very dull girl (or woman) who is such a deadweight on a date that her man companion bethinks himself of "petting" as the only possible or potential relief from tedium. It seems to me that feminine instinct linked with average intelligence would tell a woman that the way to keep a man interested and yet at arm's length—if that's where she wants him—is, firstly, to keep him amused, diverted, mentally stimulated, with an easy flow of animated conversation, seasoned with either wit, high spirits, kindly and delineative gossip about people, or substantial information (brightly colored by one's individualistic slant) on current events; and, secondly, to behave toward him, in the most nonchalant sort of way, of course, as though he were a superior person, possessing unusual discernment, breeding and charm.

In other words, the girl should take the initiative in implying,—in all she says and does,—that she is hugely enjoying the company of a very delightful gentleman. If she does so, it isn't likely he will ruin the beautiful image of himself which her attitude reflects, by placing her on the defensive against boorish "passes." If, however, it develops that he is such a blockhead, so insensitive, as to behave insolently,—despite her having set a pace of gay impersonality,—she should get rid of him as quickly as possible, without apology, and let him do the worrying (if any is done) about who wants to see whom again.

Still other means of obviating "sexy" overtures from casual beaux are: (1) To eschew the company of men who habitually "chain drink" their way through an evening; (2) to refrain absolutely from contributing to, or tacitly applauding (with tolerant smiles or forced laughter) any "smutty story" sessions; (3) to translate an arm-around-the-shoulder offer into the friendly modern-day gesture of cheerfully holding hands; (4) to accept a goodnight kiss in glancing fashion, as an airy compliment having no significance one way or another; (5) to be as direct as possible about the business of getting home; and (6) as brief as in concomitant with gracious manners in taking leave at the evening's end.

Now, about where to meet men in Washington: You would meet them here, as in any large city, as the natural, inevitable consequence of knowing somebody who, in turn, knows somebody else; and who is proud to present you as a friend,—so that from this tiny acorn of a beginning, you could produce, in time, a sturdy oak of place and position, spreading branches of "contacts" or social affiliations in all directions. You would, for instance, meet men through office associates and pleasant neighbors; through relatives, perhaps; or letters of introduction from former college associates to individuals they know here; through avocational pursuits; through participation in the athletic, dramatic, recreational and social programs sponsored by some of the Federal departments here (to which all Government employes are eligible.

As has been said, "The Lord helps those who help themselves"—and the fact that you haven't a single congenial, dependable man friend here (after several years' residence) suggests that you haven't made a very well organized effort to help yourself meet men. You've been waiting for them to find you—meantime failing to put yourself into the main stream of social activities where they are most likely to be encountered. This is the fault you must correct, if you would set sail in the direction of romance and marriage.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page

Fireproof Fabrics

It is said that most household fabrics will eventually be flame-proofed with fire retardants . . . which sounds like one step more toward a really safe life—just when war is getting down to its deadly business with scientific precision. So, after all, what good will a little flame-proofing do here and there?

Thorough Rinsing Is Essential in Washing Clothes

Good washing may be spoiled by poor rinsing. Rinse the clothes in your washer. It does a more thorough job than you can do by hand and saves work. Two rinses in the washing machine will do the work of three by hand in the tub.

Instead of washing heavily soiled garments long in the same suds, put them into clean suds for a second washing. Rub thick lather with a soft brush onto the soiled streak on the edge of collars or cuffs. Then drop the garment into the sude.

When putting clothes through a wringer, straighten each article and let it pass smoothly between the rolls. It is important to extract the water from the clothes by means of wringer or centrifugal dryer after washing and again after each rinse. This is a help toward clearer colors and whiter clothes.

Luncheon Sky Ride Given Visiting Nutritionists

MOMENTS of relaxation from duty always bring benefits. Some of the home economists who came to Washington for the nutrition conference took time out to go sky-riding as the guests of the American Airlines on a 45-minute flight. Luncheon was served while flying over the Capitol.

Miss Mary Mason, director, Home Forum, Station WRC, National Broadcasting System, acted as hostess for the guests. She conducted her daily program from the airport and a number of the guests participated on it.

Although the guests were for the most part busy watching Washington's beautiful panorama, yet they all enjoyed the delicious luncheon served during the flight. The light fiber trays with deep inserts for holding the food containers intact, were filled with appetizing foods. Here is the menu:

Luncheon Menu

Chicken Bouillon
Mixed Vegetable Salad Dressing
Assorted Sandwiches Ripe Olives
Chocolate Nut Sundae Coffee
Mint Patties

Another item on each tray was a corsage of gardenias.

New Vitamins Being Discovered To Meet Human Deficiencies

This is the last of a series of articles Ida Jean Kain has written on the new vitamin standards adopted at the National Nutrition Conference, to which she was a delegate.

By Ida Jean Kain

"VITAMIN WEEK" would have to be prolonged to a fortnight in order to treat each of these elements separately. To save time and space we'll lump together vitamins E and K, and nicotinic acid and the filtrate factor.

New vitamins are added to the list almost every year. But since a vitamin is discovered by its corresponding deficiency disease, the first discoveries are probably of the most general and practical importance. It stands to reason—and the later vitamins bear this out—that the more easily a vitamin is brought to light, the greater its necessity in the normal diet. The International Units for the most recent newcomers among the vitamins will not be included in our new "Count Your Vitamins" chart. A well-balanced diet will supply them in adequate amounts.

Vitamin E is the one which, a short while back, received so much notoriety as the anti-sterility factor. While E has been proved necessary for reproduction in animals, the human need is still hypothetical. It has been found helpful, however, in the treatment of some types of sterility and in the prevention of miscarriage in cases where the expectant mother habitually lost the baby.

Wheat Germ Oil Used

In these cases large doses of wheat germ oil were used. As a general rule, however, the ordinary, mixed diet contains this vitamin in ample amounts. Rich sources are the oils from wheat, corn and rice germ.

Vitamin K, one of the latest comers, is the anti-hemorrhagic factor and has to do with the normal clotting of the blood. The average person needs not be concerned with vitamin K. A deficiency is not dietary, but is caused by insufficient bile in the intestines which prevents its utilization. In emergency cases, the pure form of the vitamin has been used with dramatic results—but such treatment belongs to the field of medicine, not to diet.

Nicotinic acid—another member of the B family—is found to be the specific factor needed for the cure of pellagra. The well-balanced diet, however, supplies a number of foods high in this vitamin. Eggs, milk, green vegetables, lean meats, liver, kidney, fish and dried yeast are all rich sources. In pellagra districts, the need is for a better diet with more vitamins, minerals and a better quality of protein.

May Prevent Baldness

Any day now the scientists may be able to tell us the vitamin which will prevent the hair from graying—and possibly the one which will prevent baldness. To tell the truth, they haven't solved these mysteries yet. But they're getting warmer. Experiments indicate the vitamin concerned is very apt to be some one of the prolific B clay.

Two-Color Jacket Hollywood Mode

To wear a jacket of one color with a skirt of another is nothing new; so this summer you will wear jackets made of two contrasting colors. In "My Life With Caroline," Anna Lee wears a jacket of pale blue French flannel which has a square shoulder yoke of white. The skirt is blue, the accessories chalk white.

This same idea is used for a smart town suit which Anna Neagle wears in "Sunny." The deep shoulder yoke, curving to the waist in front, is white flannel. Side panels of jacket, back and sleeves are black twill. Skirt is black, hat and gloves white. With the suit Miss Neagle carries a small muff of paradise fox.

Stylists Go Back to Colonial Days for Tips

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

AMERICA looks back as early Dutch seamen, prim Puritans and gay Cavaliers inspire feminine styles in "First Fashions of America." Full gathered skirts, trim seamen blouses, soft fichus, shirred yoke effects, small puffed sleeves, narrow, tight-fitting basques, peplums and tiny shoulder capelets are all included in these authenticated trends.

Photographer Marian Stephenson, remembered for her keenness in seeking out authentic American designs in the past, is on the job again. She has scoured Virginia, New York and New England in search of Colonial relics and documents as records for initiating these "all American" fashions.

Colonial Prints, Too

The print patterns, too,, are just as full of early American flavor as the styles themselves. They are legitimate descendants of designs found in the architecture, the early decorative arts in this country and the outfits worn by the colonists.

For example, there is a colorful "weather vane" print which does honor to the sturdy cock that still tops so many of the oldest New England buildings. The quaint "picket fence" print looks for all like it might have been transplanted from a Cape Cod cottage, and there is also a "county auction" print showing knockers, lanterns and miscellaneous items typical of the American antique shop.

Latest in Fashion

Being executed in everfast cottons, the outfits are sun-fast, wash-tested and shrink-resistant. They are up-to-the-minute fashions that have a foothold on the early Ame-ican traditions.

The group of outfits include types worn for town and country and everything for a complete summer wardrobe from beach and play clothes to formal evening wear. Children's fashions, mother and daughter styles, and demure sophisticates in young junior dresses are all available in these fetterless fashions.

Pinchots Show Movies Of Trip to South Seas

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor

WANDERLUST took possession of a number of Washingtonians yesterday afternoon, and for an hour they succumbed to the urge to visit the South Seas. Boarding the good ship Mary Pinchot, they took off for a trip that almost every man and woman hopes to make some day. An hour later, the company had returned from a thrilling journey and were discussing it over the tea cups in the dining room of the Pinchot home on Rhode Island Avenue.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

The brief escape from wartime Washington was provided by former Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who entertained a few of their friends with six reels of film that recorded their South Seas trip some years ago. Watching the motion picture was as exciting an arm-chair journey as anybody ever enjoyed, and a number of those present made up their minds that, come what will, they'll take a similar trip before they die—or else . . .

There were shots of shark-infested seas, and sharks themselves; countless coral reefs, and pearl divers who lifted oysters from their coral beds deep in the sea; former cannibals who long ago had seen the error of their ways, and island dancers whose lively steps and graceful movements would do honor to the professional stage.

The most interesting scenes, however, were the ones in which Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot appeared, and particularly memorable were those in which Mrs. Pinchot, in a diving helmet, explored the bottom of the sea. Every bit as entertaining as the film itself was the running commentary given alternately by the host and hostess as the pictures flashed on the screen.

"Gifford went up ahead, and pulled me up after him," said Mrs. Pinchot, as the part of the film was unreeled showing her climbing a steep cliff that edged the sea in the Marquesa Islands.

"She went everywhere that the rest of us did," he added proudly, "and sometimes she was all for going farther than any of us dared."

'Just Like a Hollywood Set'

A lush tropical scene accented with waving palm trees against an ocean background, flashed on the screen. "We showed these films to a producer once," averred Mrs. Pinchot, "and he paid it the highest possible compliment. 'Looks just like a Hollywood set,' he said.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who were invited to make the South Seas journey with the Pinchots, were among those viewing the film. And now and then, as the picture was shown, the host and hostess commented: "That's what you would have seen if you had gone with us."

Later, Justice and Mrs. Stone were bewailing the fact that they had not been able to get away on the trip. The latter, incidentally, lasted nine months and included many adventures not recorded in the film.

Among those enjoying the picture were a number of children who accompanied their parents and later had ice cream and cake served up especially for them. Meanwhile, others in the company were having tea and wishing aloud that they could sail for the South Seas sometime soon.

Mrs. Frankfurter Pours Tea

Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, in a grey ensemble, and Mrs. Patrick Hill, whose wide-brimmed leghorn hat and pastel print frock was most becoming, presided at the tea table. Col. and Mrs. Frank J. Morrow said the films reminded them of Hawaii. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling were there, as were Mrs. Charles L. McNary and Mrs. William H. Smathers. Oswald Garrison Villard accompanied his daughter, Miss Dorothea Villard.

"That's just the kind of a trip I'd like to make," said Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross as the film drew to a close. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, whose husband is off on a business trip to the West, was another of those who enjoyed the film, as did Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Miss Patricia Grady, Mrs. John Rooseter, of San Francisco, and a number of others.

MRS. DRURY HARVEY BLAIR

Harriet Page Becomes Bride Of D. H. Blair

The wedding of Miss Harriet Ann Page, daughter of Mrs. Hardy B. Page, of 2900 Massachusetts Avenue, to Drury Harvey Blair, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Addison Blair, of Danville, Va., took place yesterday afternoon at 4 at St. Alban's Church. The Rev. Charles T. Dinner Parties To Precede Dance For Miss Bullitt

Though invitations are just out for the dance which Mrs. Frederick Sterling will give June 12 for Miss Anne Bullitt, daughter of former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, several gay dinner parties beforehand already have been planned.

Diplomatic Corps Is Well Represented At Reception Given by Undersecretary And Mrs. Welles at Oxon Hill Estate

UNDER CLEARING skies, the gardens at Oxon Hill were at their loveliest when the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles received yesterday afternoon. Guests came early and stayed late—among them Ambassadors and Ministers, with their wives, until the diplomatic list was all but complete.

Early arrivals were the Peruvian Ambassador, dean of the corps, and the Turkish and Soviet Ambassadors, the latter two immediately falling into deep conversation.

A notable absence—at least I never saw a one of them—was the diplomatic representatives of the Axis powers. Not a German, Japanese or Italian was in sight.

A NOTABLE presence — a benign one—was the Secretary of State, popular Cordell Hull. Accompanied by Mrs. Hull, who was looking very slender and pretty in Navy blue, the Secretary was surrounded by friends from the moment of his arrival.

Lady Halifax, in a frock of a becoming soft shade of brown, with a matching hat and veil, sat and chatted with Mme. van Kaathoven, who was pouring coffee. Lord Halifax mingled with the crowd and someone suggested that the tall British Ambassador could be a one-man bureau of missing persons, as he could see over everyone's head.

MR. AND MRS. Welles received their guests on the spacious porch overlooking the swimming pool and garden. Mrs. Welles was stunning in a simple afternoon dress of navy, the blouse heavily embroidered in white. With it she wore a white hat.

Tea—poured to perfection by Mrs. Stanley Reed—and coffee, as well as stronger drinks, were served in the dining room, where the long table was laden with everything delicious, including strawberries and cream. Here everyone gathered when the evening grew cool.

THE LUXEMBOURG Minister and Mme. Le Gallais accompanied amiable and good-looking Prince Felix of Luxembourg to the party, and saw that he met everyone. Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, escorted attractive Mrs. Davis, who was enjoying her first party since a recent illness.

The Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin, was on hand, as were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Ray Athertons, the Larry Duggans, the Philip Bonsals and Horton Schoellkopf, who is in Washington between foreign posts.

Wandering about the flower-filled drawing rooms were most of the Latin-American diplomats. Among them were the Mexican Ambassador, accompanied by Senora de Castillo Najera, amusing Dr. Richling, Minister of Uruguay; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. De Bayle, and the counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron.

THE FRENCH Embassy was well represented by the Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye; the Counselor, Jacques Dumaine; the new Counselor and Mme. Georges-Picot; The Naval Attache, Commander Denis de Bourgoing, and his assistant, Lieut. Charles-Henri de Levis-Mirepoix. Also present was the Vicomtesse de Bourgoing, the Marquise de Levis-Mirepoix and Baroness Baeyens.

The Minister of South Africa was accompanied by Mrs. Close and the Minister of Sweden, was with Mme. Bostrom and Mme. Bostrom's brother and sister-in-law, the Swedish Councelor and Mme. Wennerberg.

The Greek Minister, with Mme. Diamantopoulos, chatted pleasantly with friends, but one could read in his face the fate of his gallant country. Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, and Mme. Fotitch came without their husbands, who don't find much time for parties.

THE NORWEGIAN Minister looked very fit and sunburned, health which, his wife said, had been acquired in Canada. The Polish Ambassador Ciechanowska sought out their hostess for a chat on the terrace, as did the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

Others I saw were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, whose hat of small white flowers was swathed in veiling; Mrs. Philip Coffin, Donna Julia Brambilla, both wearing smart silver fox jackets; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Derek Hoyer Millar, with her uncle, Charles Carroll Glover, Clarence Hewes, Pendleton Turner, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, and Senor and Senora Hugo Gouthier.

Mrs. Leiter Off To Massachusetts

Mrs. Joseph Leiter has left Washington for her home, Beverly Farms, Mass., where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. Leiter frequently has visitors from here at Edgewater House, her North Shore estate.

Peter Marshall officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Calvin Rawls, of Southampton County, Va. Mr. Thomson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan C. Thomson, of Alexandria, Va.

Palms, white gladioli and peonies were used throughout the church for the candlelight ceremony. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length frock of Sahara beige crepe trimmed in white pique. She wore a halo beige straw hat and a cameo brooch belonging to her grandmother. Her corsage was of white orchids.

Crowden and Miss Mary Clain Crowder, of Petersburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burgess, of Long Island, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. David Bell, of Capon, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cabb, of Crewe, Va.

The bride attended State Teachers College in Farmville, Va. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority and is now a member of the faculty of George Washington High School in Alexandria. The bridegroom is associated with Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Brousses Give Another Luncheon In Their Series

The Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Brousse entertained yesterday at another in the series of small luncheons they are giving. They will be hosts again tomorrow in honor of their Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye.

Their guests yesterday were Camille Chautemps, former French Premier and Mme. Chautemps; the counselors of the Embassy, Cp. Bertrand Vigne and Guillaume Georges-Picot; Mme. Georges-Picot and Mrs. Margaret Nohowell.

Dr. William J. Collins Weds Miss Doran at St. Anthony's

Gladioli, delphinium and palms decorated St. Anthony's Church for the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Catherine Cecilia Doran and Dr. William James Collins. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Maurice Patrick Doran, of this city, and Dr. Collins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Joseph Collins, of New York.

The Rev. David V. McCauley, dean of the School of Medicine at Georgetown University, officiated at the ceremony. The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Rr. Joseph L. B. Murray, of the university, wore a costume suit of Parma violets, with a large French felt hat to match. She carried an old ivory prayer book and wore a shoulder corsage of white orchids and valley lillies.

After the wedding a breakfast for the immediate families and intimate friends was served at the Mayflower. The bride's mother wore a sheer suit of aquamarine with a hat to match and a corsage of Spring flowers. Mrs. Collins, sr., was dresed in navy blue sheer with a cluster of gardenias.

Dutch Seamen Take Over Women's Fashions

Reminiscent of the early days of the roving Dutch seamen, who plied the waters around New York in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is this spectator sports dress. The style of the dress follows the traditionally simple lines of the costumes worn by these adventurous sailors. It is made of Mallinson rayon in authentic Spinning Wheel design. This outfit and others following the same inspirational design are available in a local store.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 35, Unmarried, College Graduate, Wants To Know Where to Meet Men in Washington, and How to Hold Their Interest and Her Self Respect?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman, 35 years of age, college graduate, holding a good position with the Government. Before I came to Washington, I held several good positions in my home State,—where I had an attractive apartment and could entertain. I am habitually well dressed; love to swim, hike and ride horseback; enjoy bridge, the theater and travel (having spent more than $4,000 on trips since 1930);—and yet I can't solve my principal problem, which is: how to meet men?

Tell me, Miss Haworth, where in this city of Washington can a woman meet men? Now, don't tell me there are six women to every one man here! Maybe there are,—but of the six women, three may be too old and the other three too young to be interested in bidding for the attention of the man I would like to meet. Not that I am saying the man must be approximately 35. He could be anywhere from 30 to 50 years of age, providing he were a congenial personality. You don't meet men at church; that I know.. At least, not men in my age category. I have been to church, and the oldest unmarried men I met there were 22 or 23 years of age at most.

And here is another question: How do you engage a man's attention while keeping your self respect? Nine men out of ten expect a woman to be "fast." If they can't kiss and pet on the first or second date, they tell you to thaw out; and when they take leave of you, they say they "will see you soon,"—and that's the last you see of them. Yet I know there must be nice men around here somewhere—men holding down good jobs, men unattached and lonely, who would like to meet a companionable, well behaved woman. They might even be interested in getting married, if they could find a woman who appreciates a good home, knows how to create one, and would get a kick out of preparing good meals, keeping a spotless kitchen and being a pal to her husband.

Don't be alarmed at the candor of my statements. I have better judgment than to spring that kind of talk on a man. I would let him spring it on me instead. And gettting married isn't my immediate objective. I just want men friends. I am lonesome at present. I want the kind of social life that goes hand-in-hand with having beaux. I want the kind of men friends who appreciate a wholesome woman—one who doesn't throw herself at every man who asks her for a date. Yes, I have had dates, of sorts, at scattered intervals since I have been here; but I have never solved the problem of how to sidestep "sex," and win through to friendship. Perhaps you can advise me.

B. E. K.

Social Procedure Here Same as Elsewhere

DEAR B. E. K.: To answer your last question first—it's a very dull girl (or woman) who is such a deadweight on a date that her man companion bethinks himself of "petting" as the only possible or potential relief from tedium. It seems to me that feminine instinct linked with average intelligence would tell a woman that the way to keep a man interested and yet at arm's length—if that's where she wants him—is, firstly, to keep him amused, diverted, mentally stimulated, with an easy flow of animated conversation, seasoned with either wit, high spirits, kindly and delineative gossip about people, or substantial information (brightly colored by one's individualistic slant) on current events; and, secondly, to behave toward him, in the most nonchalant sort of way, of course, as though he were a superior person, possessing unusual discernment, breeding and charm.

In other words, the girl should take the initiative in implying,—in all she says and does,—that she is hugely enjoying the company of a very delightful gentleman. If she does so, it isn't likely he will ruin the beautiful image of himself which her attitude reflects, by placing her on the defensive against boorish "passes." If, however, it develops that he is such a blockhead, so insensitive, as to behave insolently,—despite her having set a pace of gay impersonality,—she should get rid of him as quickly as possible, without apology, and let him do the worrying (if any is done) about who wants to see whom again.

Still other means of obviating "sexy" overtures from casual beaux are: (1) To eschew the company of men who habitually "chain drink" their way through an evening; (2) to refrain absolutely from contributing to, or tacitly applauding (with tolerant smiles or forced laughter) any "smutty story" sessions; (3) to translate an arm-around-the-shoulder offer into the friendly modern-day gesture of cheerfully holding hands; (4) to accept a goodnight kiss in glancing fashion, as an airy compliment having no significance one way or another; (5) to be as direct as possible about the business of getting home; and (6) as brief as in concomitant with gracious manners in taking leave at the evening's end.

Now, about where to meet men in Washington: You would meet them here, as in any large city, as the natural, inevitable consequence of knowing somebody who, in turn, knows somebody else; and who is proud to present you as a friend,—so that from this tiny acorn of a beginning, you could produce, in time, a sturdy oak of place and position, spreading branches of "contacts" or social affiliations in all directions. You would, for instance, meet men through office associates and pleasant neighbors; through relatives, perhaps; or letters of introduction from former college associates to individuals they know here; through avocational pursuits; through participation in the athletic, dramatic, recreational and social programs sponsored by some of the Federal departments here (to which all Government employes are eligible.

As has been said, "The Lord helps those who help themselves"—and the fact that you haven't a single congenial, dependable man friend here (after several years' residence) suggests that you haven't made a very well organized effort to help yourself meet men. You've been waiting for them to find you—meantime failing to put yourself into the main stream of social activities where they are most likely to be encountered. This is the fault you must correct, if you would set sail in the direction of romance and marriage.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page

Fireproof Fabrics

It is said that most household fabrics will eventually be flame-proofed with fire retardants . . . which sounds like one step more toward a really safe life—just when war is getting down to its deadly business with scientific precision. So, after all, what good will a little flame-proofing do here and there?

Thorough Rinsing Is Essential in Washing Clothes

Good washing may be spoiled by poor rinsing. Rinse the clothes in your washer. It does a more thorough job than you can do by hand and saves work. Two rinses in the washing machine will do the work of three by hand in the tub.

Instead of washing heavily soiled garments long in the same suds, put them into clean suds for a second washing. Rub thick lather with a soft brush onto the soiled streak on the edge of collars or cuffs. Then drop the garment into the sude.

When putting clothes through a wringer, straighten each article and let it pass smoothly between the rolls. It is important to extract the water from the clothes by means of wringer or centrifugal dryer after washing and again after each rinse. This is a help toward clearer colors and whiter clothes.

Luncheon Sky Ride Given Visiting Nutritionists

MOMENTS of relaxation from duty always bring benefits. Some of the home economists who came to Washington for the nutrition conference took time out to go sky-riding as the guests of the American Airlines on a 45-minute flight. Luncheon was served while flying over the Capitol.

Miss Mary Mason, director, Home Forum, Station WRC, National Broadcasting System, acted as hostess for the guests. She conducted her daily program from the airport and a number of the guests participated on it.

Although the guests were for the most part busy watching Washington's beautiful panorama, yet they all enjoyed the delicious luncheon served during the flight. The light fiber trays with deep inserts for holding the food containers intact, were filled with appetizing foods. Here is the menu:

New Vitamins Being Discovered To Meet Human Deficiencies

This is the last of a series of articles Ida Jean Kain has written on the new vitamin standards adopted at the National Nutrition Conference, to which she was a delegate.

By Ida Jean Kain

"VITAMIN WEEK" would have to be prolonged to a fortnight in order to treat each of these elements separately. To save time and space we'll lump together vitamins E and K, and nicotinic acid and the filtrate factor.

New vitamins are added to the list almost every year. But since a vitamin is discovered by its corresponding deficiency disease, the first discoveries are probably of the most general and practical importance. It stands to reason—and the later vitamins bear this out—that the more easily a vitamin is brought to light, the greater its necessity in the normal diet. The International Units for the most recent newcomers among the vitamins will not be included in our new "Count Your Vitamins" chart. A well-balanced diet will supply them in adequate amounts.

Vitamin E is the one which, a short while back, received so much notoriety as the anti-sterility factor. While E has been proved necessary for reproduction in animals, the human need is still hypothetical. It has been found helpful, however, in the treatment of some types of sterility and in the prevention of miscarriage in cases where the expectant mother habitually lost the baby.

Wheat Germ Oil Used

In these cases large doses of wheat germ oil were used. As a general rule, however, the ordinary, mixed diet contains this vitamin in ample amounts. Rich sources are the oils from wheat, corn and rice germ.

Vitamin K, one of the latest comers, is the anti-hemorrhagic factor and has to do with the normal clotting of the blood. The average person needs not be concerned with vitamin K. A deficiency is not dietary, but is caused by insufficient bile in the intestines which prevents its utilization. In emergency cases, the pure form of the vitamin has been used with dramatic results—but such treatment belongs to the field of medicine, not to diet.

Nicotinic acid—another member of the B family—is found to be the specific factor needed for the cure of pellagra. The well-balanced diet, however, supplies a number of foods high in this vitamin. Eggs, milk, green vegetables, lean meats, liver, kidney, fish and dried yeast are all rich sources. In pellagra districts, the need is for a better diet with more vitamins, minerals and a better quality of protein.

May Prevent Baldness

Any day now the scientists may be able to tell us the vitamin which will prevent the hair from graying—and possibly the one which will prevent baldness. To tell the truth, they haven't solved these mysteries yet. But they're getting warmer. Experiments indicate the vitamin concerned is very apt to be some one of the prolific B clay.

Two-Color Jacket Hollywood Mode

To wear a jacket of one color with a skirt of another is nothing new; so this summer you will wear jackets made of two contrasting colors. In "My Life With Caroline," Anna Lee wears a jacket of pale blue French flannel which has a square shoulder yoke of white. The skirt is blue, the accessories chalk white.

This same idea is used for a smart town suit which Anna Neagle wears in "Sunny." The deep shoulder yoke, curving to the waist in front, is white flannel. Side panels of jacket, back and sleeves are black twill. Skirt is black, hat and gloves white. With the suit Miss Neagle carries a small muff of paradise fox.

Stylists Go Back to Colonial Days for Tips

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

AMERICA looks back as early Dutch seamen, prim Puritans and gay Cavaliers inspire feminine styles in "First Fashions of America." Full gathered skirts, trim seamen blouses, soft fichus, shirred yoke effects, small puffed sleeves, narrow, tight-fitting basques, peplums and tiny shoulder capelets are all included in these authenticated trends.

Photographer Marian Stephenson, remembered for her keenness in seeking out authentic American designs in the past, is on the job again. She has scoured Virginia, New York and New England in search of Colonial relics and documents as records for initiating these "all American" fashions.

Colonial Prints, Too

The print patterns, too, are just as full of early American flavor as the styles themselves. They are legitimate descendants of designs found in the architecture, the early decorative arts in this country and the outfits worn by the colonists.

For example, there is a colorful "weather vane" print which does honor to the sturdy cock that still tops so many of the oldest New England buildings. The quaint "picket fence" print looks for all like it might have been transplanted from a Cape Cod cottage, and there is also a "county auction" print showing knockers, lanterns and miscellaneous items typical of the American antique shop.

Latest in Fashion

Being executed in everfast cottons, the outfits are sun-fast, wash-tested and shrink-resistant. They are up-to-the-minute fashions that have a foothold on the early Ame-ican traditions.

The group of outfits include types worn for town and country and everything for a complete summer wardrobe from beach and play clothes to formal evening wear. Children's fashions, mother and daughter styles, and demure sophisticates in young junior dresses are all available in these fetterless fashions.

Career Woman Gets Air Post

Miss Thea T. Stephenson has been appointed commander of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force in Australia.

She is an executive in a big Sydney business firm. Her job in the W. A. A. F. will be ground organization. She will have to supervise recruiting and training and look after women in branches such as radio operating, teleprinting and office work.

Miss Stephenson said today: "This is not a glamor girl's job, and I am not a glamor girl type."

The new commander studied science and education at Melbourne University. She recently spent four years traveling in Britain, the United States and Europe.

Becoming a Habit

Silver Spring volunteer firemen yesterday tore down a bird's nest at 8617 Georgia Avenue for the third time in as many years. The nest, built inside a motor company's large neon sign, caused a short circuit.

"It happens every year," one of the volunteers said."

Capital Escapes Holiday Death Toll On Memorial Day; Picnic Bus Crashes

Eight persons were injured in holiday traffic in and around Washington yesterday while the Nation chalked up 101 violent deaths as the long weekend got underway.

Among those hurt locally was Sir Robert Mayer, 61, a British banker, who is visiting with his wife and friends at Bay Ridge, Md. The car he was driving struck another machine at Crain and Defense Highways in Prince Georges County.

Sir Robert was brought to Casualty Hospital by the Glen Dale Rescue Squad and was treated for possible concussion of the brain and lacerations to his head. His condition was not thought serious.

In the Nation-wide deaths at least 70 were caused by traffic mishaps—the others by drownings and fire.

A holiday outing for 15 members of three families ended tragically in Waynesburg, Pa., when the truck in which they were riding overturned down a 30-foot embankment, killing three children, one from each family.

A bus carrying 20 Kansas City children to a picnic plunged into a ditch and caught fire near St. Joseph, Mo., but first reports said none had been killed, although several were injured.

Three persons were killed in a single crash at Columbus, Ind. The two cars were carrying 19 passengers, 10 in one and 9 in the other. Six others were critically injured in the accident.

The National Safety Council warned that the holiday weekend may bring the greatest death and injury toll in history.

Two motorcyclists, Michael Pokea and Sandy Alexander Moyes, both of Elyria, Ohio, suffered cuts and bruises last night when their vehicle struck a parked car on the Frederick Pike near Neelville, Md. The driver of the car, who was adjusting the mone at the time, gave his name to police as Fausto Madrid, of the Mexican Embassy.

Mail Truck in Collision

Frank C. Bastgen, 23, of 2241 Thirty-ninth Place Northwest, suffered cuts and bruises to his head and concussion when his automobile struck a mail truck at the 4000 block Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. He received treatment at Georgetown Hospital.

Knocked down by an automobile at Seventh and Q Streets Northwest, Bernice Grimth, 48, of 1000 Q Street Northwest, received a possible fracture of the right shoulder. She was treated at Emergency Hospital where she was admitted for further treatment.

Six-year-old Billie Curry, of 1028 Eighth Street Northwest, ran into the street from behind parked cars in front of his home and was struck by an automobile driven, according to police, by Robert E. Wilson, 21, of 1001 Eighth Street Northwest. Wilson took the injured boy to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for multiple lacerations to his face and head and an injury to his right foot.

Woman Hurt in Taxi

Lucille McCabe, 39, of Laurel, Md., received facial lacerations when a taxicab she was riding in collided with another machine at Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Two women, Minnie Allen, colored, 44, of 4919 Sedgwick Street Northwest, and Mary Hunter, colored, 36, of 81 R Street Northwest, suffered cuts and bruises in an accident at Ninth and M Streets Northwest, and Jacqueline Christian, colored, 25, of 236 I Street Northwest, sustained a bruised forehead when she was knocked down at Ninth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. All of the women were treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Dempsey to Take 337-Mile Walk With Macfadden

More than 100 walking enthusiasts, including Bernarr Macfadden and Jack Dempsey, will set out from the White House this morning at 7 a. m. on a 15-day hike that will cover 337 miles. Destination of the long walk is Macfadden's physical culture resort in Dansville, N. Y.

Macfadden and Dempsey, both tanned and fit looking, arrived in Washington last night by airplane from Florida. They were interviewed by Tony Wakeman over Station WOL. This is the seventh year the hike has been held, Macfadden said, and marks the first time Washington has been used as a starting point.

Purpose of the hike, Macfadden said, is to popularize walking. "Germany owes a great deal of its national energy," he said, "to thousands of walking clubs."

Eklund to Face Trial Monday As Sniper Who Slew Three

By Dillard Stokes.
Post Staff Writer

John Eugene Eklund, a close-mouthed, 26-year-old college boy with a burglary record, will go on trial for his life in the District Court on Monday.

The prosecutors claim he is the sniper who killed three men with shots in the back here last fall. With 65 witnesses, called from as far as Connecticut and North Carolina, Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray will try to build circumstantial evidence into a case that will send Eklund to the electric chair.

Ecklund denies he killed anybody. Defense Counsel James R. Kirkland and Leonard P. Walsh hope to weave the Government testimony and that of a dozen witnesses of their own into a pattern of innocence.

Shot in Back of Heads

Ethel Newsom, 32, colored, heard a burst of pistol fire in front of her home 2600 I Street Northwest, shortly after midnight last October 5. Her Stepfather Samuel Banks, 62, had been sitting on a bench in front of the house, talking with Theodore Goffney, 45, colored, a laundry worker of 823½ Twenty-sixth Street Northwest.

The woman rushed downstairs, and found the two men dead with pistol wounds in the back of their heads. They lacked enemies and the police were baffled. The bullets were saved.

The strange killer waited 10 days to strike a second time, again at midnight. Walking home from a dance, Hyman McLean, 17, colored, and Mildred Virginia Washington, 17, 2323 Virginia Avenue Northwest, came to a temporary bridge on Rock Creek Parkway at K Street Northwest.

"There is a man following us," the girl said. Then a figure crept out of the bushes and opened fire. McLean fell dead, shot in the back. The girl fled, screaming. But she had seen the killer.

Tip May Be Disclosed

For more than a month, the police questioned suspects, tested firearms and prowled dark neghborhoods around midnight. The killings were linked to several other unexplained attacks on colored victims.

Then they got a tip, which has never been revealed, but which doubtless will be disclosed to the jurors before Justice James M. Proctor next week. It led them to arrest Eklund in the 1700 block of Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest on Saturday, November 16.

On parole from a term for burglary in an Indiana prison, Eklund came to Washington in 1939, studied at a university here, dropped out, held odd jobs several months, then went to work at the Glenn L. Martin airplane plant in Baltimore.

The police said Mildred Washington "partially" identified Eklund as the man who fired the shots in the parkway. Eklund met all questions with protests of innocence, spoken tight-lipped without details.

"O. K., prove it," he told detectives.

"I'll talk when the trial comes, if any," he said when pressed for explanations.

Out of a tree near the Hot Shoppe across the Highway Bridge, the police dug two bullets. A witness was found, the police said, who saw Eklund firing a pistol into this tree. Capt. John N. Fowler, ballistics expert, said these bullets came from the same .38 caliber Colt revolver that fired four slugs taken from the bodies of the two colored men on I Street.

Dictograph Used

Eklund's attorney later charged that the police furthered their investigation by using a dictograph to eavesdrop on a conference between the youth and another lawyer he consulted. Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, first denied, then admitted the eavesdropping and said nothing of importance was learned.

The police searched Eklund's room in Baltimore, seizing an editorial clipped from The Post which discussed "The Crime Picture," several newspapers which described crimes in Washington, and a strange machine of glass, metal and rubber. Its purpose is a mystery.

From Eklund's home here, 2109 F Street Northwest, detectives took a paper spiral, painstakingly measured and put together, which they said was a model of a silencer for a pistol.

The trial is expected to take two weeks.

New Phone Book Reflects District's Speedy Growth

The new summer-fall issue of the Washington telephone directory is now being delivered to subscribers here, David E. McCoy, general commercial manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., announced yesterday.

The new volume reflects Washington's growing population, by surpassing its predecessors by 44 pages, making a total of 1,404 pages. Some 425,000 directories have been printed, with 245,000 listings in the alphabetical section—a gain of 16,000 over the last issue.

The book is bound in a light green cover, featuring the familiar "Spirit of Communication." It required less than six weeks to compile, edit, print and bind. Approximately 354,000 copies are being delivered no wto subscribers.

Sun-Spot Weather Forecasts Nearer

The day when useful long-range weather forecasts, based upon solar observations, will become a reality has been brought a step nearer through recent observations at the Astrophysical Observatory of the Smithsonian Institution, Secretary Charles G. Abbott said yesterday.

There are ten long periods in the radiation of the sun, he said. Each of these has directly observable effects on the temperature and rainfall of the earth, Dr. Abbott reported, but this varies with place and season. As yet, he added, there is some unknown factor which complicates long-range weather forecasting.

The sun's radiation also varies irregularly from day to day, Abbott asserted, for the sun's surface has hot spots as well as cold spots upon it. Columns of matter shot from sun-spot regions appear to bombard the earth and veil the sun slightly when such sun spots are exactly central, he said.

Caldwell Goes To Justice Department

Arthur B. Caldwell, 34, resigned yesterday as an assistant District Attorney in Washington to become a member of the criminal division of the Department of Justice.

Caldwell received wide recognition a year ago by advancing the principle that wanton killing with an automobile is murder and obtaining conviction of a man who killed a pedestrian while speeding in flight from the scene of an accident in which he killed a woman.

Although he handled this and other sensational murders, Caldwell specialized in narcotics prosecutions and in presenting cases arising out of investigations by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Only eight cases he prosecuted were appealed. He won all of them in the United States Court of Appeals here.

Caldwell was born at Mammoth Spring, Ark., September 1, 1906, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Caldwell, who now live at Little Rock. After graduating from the University of Arkansas, Caldwell came to Washington in 1929 as a member of the staff of the late Senator Joseph Robinson. Later he was an aide to Vice President Garner for several years, meanwhile studying law at George Washington University. He joined the District Attorney's staff in 1935 after a brief tour of duty with the Federal Trade Commission.

Caldwell is unmarried and lives at 2150 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Girl Wades Back After Leap From Taxi Into River

Shallow water in the Tidal Basin and early morning temperatures not conducive to swimming combined yesterday to change abruptly the mind of a 19-year-old Chilhowie, Va., girl.

According to Frederick Titzell, a cab driver of 2201 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, the girl was riding around the basin in his taxi about 6 a. m. when she jumped from the machine over the seawall.

He stopped his cab and ran after her. At the edge of the wall, Titzell told police, he found his fare standing knee deep in cold water and perfectly willing to wade ashore. He took her to Emergency Hospital and she was transferred to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

D. C. Defense Registration Dates Set

Volunteers Slated To Be Signed Up On June 10, 11, 12; HospitalAides Needed

Machinery to mobilize a volunteer force of men and women for the civilian protection of Washington under the President's proclamation of an unlimited national emergency was set in motion officially yesterday by the District Defense Council.

For the special registration days of June 10, 11 and 12, the council's committee on volunteer service announced a list of 46 public schools where citizens may apply for service. It was estimated by Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the committee, that upward of 35,000 persons will register on the three days.

She said there is an immediate need for several thousand volunteers and the number will increase as new demands are made. Mrs. Bernton pointed out that 90 per cent of defense council work must be borne by volunteers.

35,000 Estimated

Although venturing the preliminary estimate of 35,000 registrants, Mrs. Bernton added:

"We must be prepared for any emergency. Not one of us has any idea of what the future may bring. For this reason, we cannot urge too strongly that every single man and woman register. Only in this way can we know the potential volunteer strength of the community."

Mrs. Bernton, wife of a local physician, said several hundred volunteers already are in training to handle details of the registrations. She added that applications will not be confined strictly to local residents. Persons living in nearby Maryland and Virginia who desire to offer their services may register in the District, she said.

Some of the jobs to be filled immediately include typists, switchboard operators, laboratory technicians, nurses' aids, hospital orderlies, nursery school workers, club leaders, hostesses, information booth attendants, canteen workers, receptionists, interviewers, athletic coaches, vehicle drivers and kindergarten teachers.

Hospitals Need Help

All hospitals in the city, said Mrs. Bernton, are calling for persons who have completed Red Cross courses as nurses' aids, and at least one hospital needs immediately 40 of these aids and 20 orderlies.

There is an urgent need, she continued, for women to run community hospitality centers for service men stationed at nearby camps. Both the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. settlement houses will soon throw open their doors for dances, teas and other forms of entertainment and hostesses are needed immediately to run these functions.

It is also planned to establish information booths at strategic points throughout the city where men in uniform and other newcomers may be guided in finding lodgings, entertainment and transportation. Mrs. Bernton said all these booths would be manned by volunteers.

"There is a place for everyone in the volunteer program," said Mrs. Bernton, "and every man and woman from 16 to 60 should register if they have any free time and are willing to give to civilian defense."

Other types of volunteer services will include auxiliary police officers and firefighters, airplane "spotters" and various types of unskilled, semiskilled and skilled workers.

On the days designated, registrations will be held at the following places from 3:30 to 8:30 p. m.:

Central Volunteer Bureau, 501 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Brazilian to Get Meyer Award

Dr. Edmundo Navarro de Andrade, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, will receive the Meyer Medal for distinguished services in plant introduction at ceremonies at the Department of Agriculture's Glendale, Md., laboratories on Monday.

More than 21,000,000 eucalyptus trees from the Netherlands Indies have been planted and developed in Brazil by Dr. Navarro, according to the National Geographic Society. The trees are used for railroad ties, telegraph poles, railroad fuel and paper. They are fast-growing, inexpensive, and of vast economic importance to Brazil, it was stated.

Dr. Navarro will discuss his experiments in a public address at the Cosmos Club on Monday at 8:30 p. m.

Msgr. Hyvernat's Body to Lie In State at Catholic U. Shrine

MSGR. HENRY HYVERNAT

The body of the Right Rev. Msgr. Henry Hyvernat, noted Catholic University scholar, who died Thursday night in Providence Hospital, will lie in state at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, from 4 p. m. until 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

At 7:30 p. m., the Office of hte Dead will be in charge of the Sulpician Fathers of the Theological College of the university.

A solemn pontifical mass of requiem will be held for Msgr. Hyvernat at 10 a. m. Monday, with the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and rector of the university, as celebrant. The service will be attended by members of the teaching staff of the university and priests and seminarians of the religious houses of the community in academic costume. Burial will be in the Catholic University plot in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Msgr. Hyvernat was a professor at Catholic University since its founding, on November 13, 1889, and was the last survivor of the original faculty. He was a noted authority on Semitic and Oriental languages and Biblical archaeology. His greatest scholarly achievement was the editing of the Coptic version of the Bible, in 1910, on commission from the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

Born In France

Born at Saint-Julien-en-Jarret, Loire, France, on June 30, 1858, Msgr. Hyvernat received his early education at the Petit Seminarie de Saint Jean, Lyons, from 1867-1876. He received his B. Litt. degree from the University of France in 1876. Later he attended the seminaries of Issy and Paris, and received his D.D. degree from the Pontifical University in Rome in 1882. An honorary Litt. D. degree was conferred on him by the University of Munich in 1919. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1882.

Msgr. Hyvernat was elevated to the rank of Prothonotary Apostolic on July 2, 1939, in the first honor to be bestowed during the Golden Jubilee Year of Catholic University by the late Pope Pius XI, who had known the noted priest years before at the Vatican Library.

Before coming to America and Catholic University, Msgr. Hyvernat taught at the Chapelain de Saint Louis das Francais, Rome, in 1882. From 1885 to 1888 he was professor of Assyriology and Egyptology at the Apollonare, Rome. He held the post of interpreter for Oriental languages at the Sacred Congregation de Propaganda Fide from 1885 to 1889, and was, for awhile, a substitute professor of Greek at the Collegio Urbana, Rome.

Occupied Andrews Chair

During his more than 50 years at Catholic University, Msgr. Hyvernat occupied the Andrews Chair of Biblical Archaeology and was head of the department of Semitic and Egyptian languages and literatures.

A Chevalier in the French Legion of Honor, Msgr. Hyvernat once went on an extensive scientific mission for the French government, through Armenia, Kurdistan, Mesopotamia, Babylonia, India, Egypt and Palestine. He was also a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Thirty years ago Msgr. Hyvernat was the moving spirit in the organization of Catholic University's museum. He donated his own valuable personal collection, including one of the three translations of the Coptic version of the Bible. In 1903 he founded the Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium and had been director of the Coptic section since 1912, when Catholic University, with the Catholic University at Louvain, Belgium, assumed ownership of the Corpus.

Ill health in 1928 forced the educator to abandon most of his activities, but he continued as a consultant until last year.

Cooperative League Severs All Relations With Bookshop

The District of Columbia Cooperative League has turned back to the Bookshop addressograph plates and files of the Bookshop membership.

Announcing this action yesterday in a letter to David Wahl, Bookshop president, Mrs. Imogene Hogle Putnam, who is president of the league, said the act terminates all relationship between the two organizations.

Mrs. Putnam, who last week scuffled with a Dies Committee agent to prevent seizure of a list of 1,200 members of the Bookshop, a cooperative store at 916 Seventeenth Street Northwest, accused the Bookshop of defying "the cooperative supervision of the league." As examples of its defiant attitude, she cited mailing by the Bookshop, "without knowledge of the league board, of a circular of the Washington Committee for Democratic Action and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties."

Jules Yanover, executive secretary of the Bookshop, last night challenged Mrs. Putnam's authority to sever relationship between the League and the Bookshop. He charged the League's board with unconstitutional action, and maintained the Bookshop's resignation from the League, submitted nearly two months ago to take effect June 18, still stood.

Answering Mrs. Putnam's charge of Bookshop defiance, Yanover said, "As an autonomous affiliate we held we have a right to mail to the membership material our board feels of interest to the Bookshop."

Grocer's Gun Scares Off Bandits

Ezekiel Cunningham, groceryman at 700 Third Street Northwest, frightened four gunmen out of his store last night with "an old rusty revolver that wouldn't even shoot."

Cunningham said two of the men pointed guns across the counter at him and asked for his money. The groceryman, instead, reached for his gun which surprised his visitors so much they "fell over each other getting out."

Escaped Tiger Report Proves to Be False

An erroneous report, circulated last night, that a tiger had escaped from its cage at the Zoo sent police and zoo officials on a wild-goose chase and interrupted routine for a half hour. Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, investigated and reported all tigers had been counted and all was well among the big cats. More than 20 telephone calls were received at the Mann home from startled Washingtonians who had heard the rumor.

Extra Judges To Help Clear D. C. Dockets

Sessions in Civil, Criminal Courts This Summer Are Increased

Two visiting judges, together with two local justices, will sit here this summer in an unprecedented effort to clear the District Court's civil and criminal dockets, now far in arrears.

Summer court plans, learned last night from Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, call for two civil and two criminal courts in July, two criminal courts in August and two civil and two criminal courts in September. Last summer, while the regular court was in recess, there was one criminal court in session during July and another in September.

This drastic setup, it is hoped, will bring the cluttered dockets up to date, so that the fall courts can go to work with clean books.

Criminal Docket Month Behind

At present the courts are so far behind that civil court defendants who were indicted as long as a year ago are just being brought to trial. The criminal docket is about a month behind.

A need for speedier trials has long been advocated by the Washington Criminal Justice Association. Gearing up the criminal justice machinery, it has pointed out, is vital to a solution of our crime problem.

The practice of bringing in judges from other parts of the country to help clean the court calendar was initiated this spring by Justice Groner. Considerable progress was achieved. However, the long American Medical Association trial and other extensive trials have left the courts in a lagging condition still.

The long delay in the appointment of a successor to Justice Peyton Gordon, who retired four months ago and who was inactive because of illness for the last year, is another factor in the courts' predicament.

Justice Groner, who arranges for the special courts as the senior judge in this circuit, said the visiting judges will begin their duties here July 1.

Five Aides Named By Dr. Dunham

Dr. Franklin Dunham, executive director of the National Catholic Community Service, announced yesterday the appointment of an executive assistant and four field supervisors to assist him in coordinating activities of the organization throughout the country.

The National Catholic Community Service is cooperating nationally in meeting community spiritual, recreational and welfare needs growing from military and industrial mobilization for national defense, Dr. Dunham said.

New officers are James J. Norris, of Elizabeth, N. J., administrative assistant; John J. Spillane, of Worcester, Mass., in charge of New England States; Gerard J. Janeske, of New York, in charge of Eastern States; Bernard J. O'Shea, of Chicago, in charge of the Midwest region, and Frank E. Cane, of Pasadena, Calif., in charge of the Pacific Coast region.

Rep. Smith Pays Honor to Statues

Representative Margaret Chase Smith remembered Maine yesterday.

It occurred to her it was high time tourists from the rest of the 48 States realized that among the inhabitants of Statuary Hall at the Capitol, two of Maine's distinguished sons were deserving of attention.

So yesterday she placed baskets of peonies at the feet of statues of Hannibal Hamlin, who was Vice President during Abraham Lincoln's first administration, and of William King, who was the State's first Governor.

Mrs. Smith, Maine's first Congresswoman, comes from Skowhegan, an Indian name meaning "a place to watch."

'Million Dollar Baby' Is Hilarious Romance

A Splendid Cast Makes Lively Entertainment Of Slightly Wacky Story on Earle Screen; The Stage Revue Boasts Three Stellar Acts

BELL

First known by the title of "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America." "Million Dollar Baby" deals with an elderly spinster millionairess' attempt to rectify a bit of business chicanery in the third generation. The rightful heir to the fortune of which her grandfaher was defrauded turns out to be the gay little working girl, living in a rickety boarding house and hopelessly in love with a young piano player who thinks he is today's Beethoven. This is the love that endures throughout the picture and convinces Miss Wheelwright that when two youngsters are as self-reliant as that, there need be no fear for the future of America.

The presence of a handsome young attorney in the proceedings complicates the romantic developments almost to the point of disaster. He also adds immeasurably to the contagious comedy in which the action abounds. That is, he adds to the comic developments once the fable returns from Miss Wheelwright's estate in Switzerland to New York and things really begin to get under way. "Million Dollar Baby" begins slowly, but ends in a whirlwind.

Cast Is Shrewdly Chosen

The temptation is strong to say that Priscilla Lane, in the title role; Jeffrey Lynn, as the youthful lawyer; Ronald Reagan, as the level-headed musician, and May Robson, the Miss Wheelwright, in this film match the best performances they ever have brought to the screen. The youngest of the Lanes has never been given so fruitful an opportunity to demonstrate that she is both an effective actress and a spontaneous and delightful comedienne. Miss Robson's role enables her to be characteristically brusque and tender, bitter and compassionate. She plays it for even more than it is worth. Lee Patrick, Helen Westley, George Barbier, John Qualen, Richard Carle, Walter Catlett and scores more provide the sort of support that makes for well-nigh perfect balance.

The offscreen portions of the program are initiated by Eileen Ritter's revived "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" interlude, which yesterday was productive of more than ordinary public response and some better-than-usual volunteer voices. Joan Ritter has a clever song introduction for Goodrich and Nelson, who prove two gymnastic hand-balancers a shade above par, and Lynn, Royce and Vanya offer their serio-comic combination of adagio and burlesque dancing that never fails to bowl the customers out of their pews. The piece de resistance of the stage bill, however, is the Golden Gate Quartet of colored singers—with guitar accompanist—last heard in the Capital at the President's birthday "Gala." Their spirituals are incomparably sung and "The Little Brown Jug" is a humorously conceived encore. The Roxyettes' two major numbers—a military tap dance and the Evzones Greek drill routine—are splendidly executed fillips of a program evidently assembled for unadulterated enjoyment and serving that purpose perfectly.

Two Very Nosey Young People!

JEFFREY LYNN AND PRISCILLA LANE in the two principal roles in "Million Dollar Baby," the new Warner Brothers' production, now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Ronald Reagan completes the trio of stars, with May Robson, Lee Patrick, Helen Westley, George Barbier and many more in support

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 30 (INS).—Lots of things are happening to Charlie Ray, movie star of yesterday. Not only is he marrying Yvonne Guerin, but there is a strong chance that he will sell the movie rights to James Whitcomb Riley's poem, "The Girl I Love," his most successful movie, to Darryl Zanuck. Interesting, too, is the way it happened. Charlie is appearing with Joan Bennett and Henry Fonda in "Wild Geese Calling," and he told Henry that he'd like to see him play in the movie version of "The Girl I Love." because, he told Fonda, "You are best in the awkward, gawky, country-boy roles such as I played years ago."

PARSONS

Fonda read the script written by the well-known playwright, George Scarborough, and took it to Darryl Zanuck, who is interested. Only a few months ago Joe Pasternak was considering "The Girl I Love." actually owned by Charlie's sister, Beverly Ray, for Jimmy Stewart and Deanna Durbin, but then Jimmy went to camp and it was dropped.

Well, I've heard spy stories before—but "The Lady Has Plans," which will star Madeleine Carroll, at Para, is really something new under the sun. In this original Leo Birinski yarn, Madeleine plays a modern Mata Hari, who picks up important secrets by just visiting popular resorts. All day long she lies on the beach sun-tanning her back, and no one suspects that when her maid rubs suntan oil on her she's really writing military information in indelible ink!

Alan Curtis telephoned early to say Ilona Massey no sooner thinks she has all visa troubles straightened out for her South American concert tour than some new trouble pops up. Everything was all but set for Ilona to leave the United States June 25 and get back again, when the Pan-American people informed her that the plane on which she flies touches an island owned by the British, and since Ilona is Hungarian she's technically an "enemy." However, a special visa will be given by the British consul, for Ilona has always expressed a wish to become an American citizen.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Natalie Kalmus, director of Technicolor, is desperately ill with intestinal flu; Judy Garland dining with Dave Rose at Ciro's and happily exhibiting her engagement ring; Claudette Colbert getting ready to move into Mervyn Leroy's beach house, which she has rented for the summer; John Payne flew back from New York today to spend his birthday with his wife, Anne Shirley.

Townsend Netcher's heart may belong to Bernice Parks, but he certainly isn't overlooking Bonnie Edwards. She was his guest of honor at a birthday party the other evening; Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor go to San Diego Sunday with Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, when they present a program for the Navy; Mickey Rooney holding hands with Sheila Ryan on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot. Hope Linda Darnell didn't see him.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 30.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT: After the President's broadcast Tuesday night Eleanor Roosevelt waited until the White House guests had finished congratulating her husband and then she asked him, "Under this new declaration of unlimited emergency, what will your new emergency powers be?" . . . The President smiled and replied, "You wait and see."

LEONARD LYONS

IRVING BERLIN, who was at the White House that evening, brought with him a portable phonograph and recordings of his two new defense songs, which the President wanted to hear. The machine couldn't be operated on the White House current. The President said that he preferred, anyway, to hear Berlin play and sing the new songs. And so Irving obliged, and added a medley of the tunes he had written in 1917.

SOCIAL NOTES: The Marchioness of Queensbury, who arrived here this week, told of the luncheon she attended at the Savoy—when a bomb suddenly shattered all the windows. Only one woman screamed. The waiter glared at her, until she bowed in apology to the other patrons in the room. The waiter then turned to the Marchioness, and asked, "Did you say you preferred White wine—or Red?"

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: The Marquis of Queensbury has been accustomed for many years to play poker at the regular sessions held at his club. The game always has been played at a table directly underneath a glass roof . . . "The roof is so thin," the players were warned, "that one small bomb might kill all of you" . . . "Cards have been played at this hallowed spot for hundreds of years," said Queensbury, "and we shall not change it" . . . "But this is war," he was reminded. "And you must make a change." . . . "Here we stay," said the marquis, dealing the cards, "but we'll reduce the stakes."

LOCAL NEWS: William Batt, former head of the National Business Advisory Council, will be named to an advisory post in the White House staff . . . Honeychil' Wilder, who has been visiting cafes every night for the past six years, is becoming a cafe entertainer. She'll team with Billy Vine for the new Hurricane show . . . Ben Cohen, who is returning from London, has sent word that he'd prefer not to take the SEC chairmanship, but wants to return to London . . . The first split in the America First Committee is expected to take place in Chicago . . . Blanche Ring, who introduced the song, "Bedelia," in 1903, finally met a girl bearing that name. She's 20-year-old Bedelia Falls, making her radio debut as Miss Ring's daughter in Mutual's new serial, "Fight Camp."

LOST & FOUND DEPT.: Adron Copland, one of America's best-known composers of modern music, lost a valuable valise at Broadway and Sixty-third Street Tuesday night. Its contents are of no value to the finder, who will be rewarded. But it contained a collection of Copland's precious manuscripts, including an unfinished composition, called "Odets Sonata," which had been commissioned by Clifford Odets . . . Last season Odets presented "Night Music," a play in which a valise was lost and then recovered. Copland and Odets hope to find as happy an ending to this episode.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Sergt. Alvin C. York will soon begin a Nation-wide tour of the Army camps. He will relate to the new soldiers how he, a one-time conscientious objector, went overseas and became the most-decorated soldier in the A. E. F.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Al Smith, who now occupies aisle seats down front whenever he goes to the theater, is telling this story of the first time he ever saw a theatrical performance: The admission to the Bowery showplace, at that time, was 10 cents—a sum beyond Al's means. At that time, also, the well-dressed man always wore a hand-carved peach pit suspended from the center of his watch chain . . . The carvers purchased the pits at the standard price of six for 1 cent. Al therefore went to Fulton Fish Market, where the vendors feasted upon peaches, collected 60 pits from the sidewalks and gutters where they had been thrown, and sold them for the coveted 10 cents.

'Devil Dogs of the Air' Still Timely After Six Long Years

By Richard L. Coe

"DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR," Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by John Monk Saunders, adapted to the screen by Malcolm Stuart Boylan and Earl Baldwin, costarring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Margaret Lindsay, Frank McHugh, Helen Lowell Johnny Arledge, Ward Bond, William Davidson, Robert Barrat, Russell Hicks and Olive Jones. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Always news-minded, the Warner Brothers have looked again at one of their 1934 copyrights and found in it a mock sea battle wherein the Marines land and, with the cooperation of the Navy, get the situation well in hand. Knowing that nothing could be so timely as a camera's-eye view of even a rehearsal for the things the world watches so grimly today, the most journalistically inclined of the Hollywood studios reissued it yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater. "Devil Dogs of the Air" is its title; James Cagney and Pat O'Brien are its stars.

The sham battle is still a fascinating, instructive thing to watch, even if events of the past few weeks may have revolutionized the technique it expounds. There are no swarms of parachute troops landing from that fifth front the battlefields have so recently developed. And if anything ages more quickly than women's clothes in a six-year-old film it is airplanes. With the sleek monsters of the sky so dominant in the succeeding newsreels, the strides made by the Navy Department and the Marine Corps collaborated with Warners are almost beyond belief.

This collaboration between Uncle Sam's defense forces and Hollywood also has its timely interest. For 20 years audiences have been seeing similar credit lines on their film fare; that such is increasingly important to public information, yet still lacks the domination of the Government it serves, is a cheering phenomenon.

Newsreel Covers President's Speech

As for the story Malcolm Stuart Boylan and Earl Baldwin adapted from the late John Monk Saunders' original, it's as familiar as Marlene Dietrich's voice. Wiseguy Cagney joins the Marine squadron where his oldtime hero, Pat O'Brien, is doing very nicely for himself in his own quiet way. Jimmy preempts part of Pat's courage, some of his respect and all of his girl friend.

While time may have dampened the original punch of this familiar situation, it's still got what it takes for an ordinary comedy-drama's demands. Frank McHugh is on hand to play a constantly thwarted ambulance driver and Johnny Arledge is his assistant. As usual in the lapse of but a few years in a modern story, it's the girls who take the rap. This time it's Margaret Lindsay who's the heroine, looking like someone out of a 6-year-old roto section. Helen Lowell plays her "ma."

Lloyd Bacon, who always has been at home with action films, directed, emphasizing that revealing sham battle that was to become so justifiable a reason for the picture's revival.

The Metropolitan's short subjects include a color travelogue of "Delhi," which, because it emphasizes vistas and buildings and ignores the haunts of the natives is needlessly listless. There's a merry color cartoon with "Sniffles" and "The Bookworm" and a Grantland Rice Sportlight on the fine arts of tumbling. The Paramount newsreel captures a comprehensive view of the President's Tuesday night address and a highly interesting background on the Hood-Bismarck struggle.

'Athletic Inspector'

Frank Morgan calls himself an "athletic inspector" because he enjoys watching baseball games, horse racing, boxing matches and other sports events.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 30.

Here are some rules Jack Oakie handed out to newcomer Jackie Gleason: "Only insult the right people—the little ones can't do you enough harm to do you any good.

HOPPER

"If a guy slaps your back, tell him you don't like him either.

"If you have a secret you don't want repeated, tell it to only one girl—it'll make the front page before she's through.

"Love your neighbor, but don't get to know him personally.

"Take all the advice you can get, then use none of it.

"Always be seen in the right places with the wrong people.

"Beware of Hollywood friends who never hit below the belt—their aim is poor."

Why, Jack! And here I've always thought you were a comic!

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom had the last word in an argument, and not with his fists, either. A highbrow was explaining why our present taxes were necessary, and finished off with a flourish, "Why should we saddle posterity with debts that we have incurred?" "Yeah?" said Maxie, "Why not? Posterity never did anything for us!"

When we criticize Hollywood, there's always a basis for it. A friend of mine, just out of college, had an opportunity to become a stenographer at a major studio. She went for an interview, was asked if she knew shorthand. She didn't, but invented her own method, and she got the job. Kept it a year, went from there into the reading department, became a junior writer, and wrote one of the best pictures a major lot turned out last year. She asked for a raise in salary. It was refused. She's now on her way to China to write short stories, and she'll probably go back to the same studio at ten times the salary she got before—and the price will be nearer her worth.

Another story concerns two writers. They did the only decent picture a well known prima donna made in Hollywood. The kids got $125 each weekly for the story. When it was over, everybody connected with the picture received beautiful presents. The writers weren't even thanked. They asked for a raise of $25 each, which was denied. The picture grossed $3,000,000. They went to another studio and got $400 each. Now both boys are serving Uncle Sam at $21 a month.

Kathryn Grayson, whose singing charmed us in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," is making Victor recordings of both popular and classical songs. And Kathryn's making more sweet music with John Shelton.

Nelson Eddy called on Jeanette MacDonald on the "Smilin' Through" set, and brought 30 kids from the Wickenberg, Ariz., high school along to meet her.

When a distinctly unpopular actress said to Martha Raye, "If wonder if my public will remember me when I'm old and feeble!"—Martha was all sympathy. "Of course, they do" she cooed

Nats Drop 2 More, Sink Deeper in Cellar

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Some sort of a milestone was reached in the American League this week. Up in Boston, Jimmy Foxx, whose name has been a synonym for slug for 15 years, was benched for—of all things—weak hitting. That wasn't supposed to happen to Foxx.

POVICH

Apparently Foxx was unable to make, buy or get the loan of a hit in recent games, because when Manager Joe Cronin finally took the long step and benched him, he was turning in desperation to Lou Finney as a first baseman. Foxx was hitting a mere .254 but Finney was owning only a .191 average. Times must have been tough for Foxx.

For years one of baseball's favorite axioms has been that age doesn't dim the batting eye of the natural sluggers. "He'll hit when they have to wheel him up there in a chair," has been an oft-repeated expression, but the suspicion is now that it has been an empty phrase. Vision is important, of course, but batters hit with something other than their eyes.

Babe Ruth never complained of fading eyesight when he passed out of the majors, yet he wasn't hitting .300 in those fading seasons. Lou Gehrig was a sick man, but vision wasn't one of his troubles when his hitting slumped. Al Simmons, ranked with Rogers Hornsby as one of the great right-handed hitters of the majors, couldn't muster a .300 average in his last seasons and there was nothing wrong with his batting eye.

We talked to old Joe Jackson about hitting a couple of months ago in his liquor store at Greenville, S. C., and he just about exploded the myth about veteran ball players who were supposed to hit as long as they could see. "Sonny, it ain't the eye that goes back on you," he said. "It's the wrists. That's when the old timers begin to slump, when age gets into their wrists.

"I was still pretty close to my peak when I passed out of the game," said Jackson, "and I didn't have that wrist trouble, but I seen it in others. Everybody hits with wrist action. When you're young, you got it. You can break those wrists sharp and quick. They aren't throwing any balls by you. You don't have any more of that quick power. That's the only reason an old ball player ever gets into a hitting slump."

Out in Chicago, fat Jimmy Dykes seems to be doing the prize managerial job in the American League. He has stacked his discards into a neat and potent sort of outfit and the White Sox are hot on the necks of the league-leading Indians. Dykes' team wasn't supposed to be even a first-division club.

The White Sox are close to refuting the theory that an elaborate farm system is completely necessary to a good big league ball club. The White Sox don't own any farm teams, yet they are up in second place and giving the Indians what-for. A heap more important than a farm system seems to be a manager who can be astute in a trading way, as Dykes has been.

Of Chicago's regular line-up, only two of Dykes' ball players aside from pitchers were original White Sox purchases from the minors—Center Fielder Mike Kreevich and Shortstop Luke Appling. The others, all of them, were lassoed by Dykes in clever trades—Joe Kuhel, Taft Wright, Mike Tresh, Eric McNair, Dario Lodigiani, Julius Solters, Thornton Lee, and Bill Dietrich.

This week Dykes confidently signed Ben Chapman after the Nats had given him his unconditional release. If Dykes can practice some sort of magic on Chapman and convert him into a valuable ball player, then the last doubt of his managerial acumen will be dispelled, because Chapman had reached the utter nadir of big league ability when he was released by Washington.

Prime example of Dykes' way with cast-offs is Bill Dietrich, the pitcher who was fired by the A's and Nats because he couldn't win. Shortly after joining the White Sox, Dietrich pitched a no-hit game, and thus far this season he has turned in a one-hit and a two-hit shutout.

Before Dietrich reached the White Sox, he had been no great shucks as a pitcher. He had a tolerable fast ball and a curve that was fair enough, but he wasn't winning. Against him was what was called Dietrich's temperament. His habit of flying into a rage at errors behind him, stamped him as somewhat undesirable.

We asked Dykes recently why on earth he would pay the $7,500 waiver price for such as Dietrich, and the White Sox manager tipped his mit on matters of that sort. "I don't care what kind of a reputation Dietrich had," said Dykes. "When I was playing ball in this league and Dietrich was pitching, he always looked plenty tough to me. He never had any trouble getting me out, and that's why I bought him."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Indianapolis, May 30.—This is a piece which should be written by John Steinbeck, the friend of the Joads and their okie companions. It is all about Harry Futrell and Olin Greeley. Ever hear tell of them, neighbor?

CONSIDINE

Well, sir, Harry Futrell drove the first car through the general admission gate today at the Indianapolis Speedway race. It is a retired Dodge milk truck. Olin was right behind him in his own ranting, snorting old Chevvy.

This happened at 6 a. m. and the two of them, straining behind the wheels of their Grapes of Wrathful jalopies, bumped over the sunbaked infield of the track and wheezed and chattered to a stop at the choicest parking places on the rail. And then resumed their okie ham-squat, awaiting the hour of the race.

If you don't think this was the biggest moment of their lives then you're nuts. Because Harry got in line outside the general admission gate just 36 days ago (actually) and young Olin, an emaciated Massachusetts okie, with watery eyes and a full retreating chin, got in line in back of Harry the day after the Kentucky Derby, which was May 4. They led a procession of about five miles of cars, including some wrecks for which Darryl Zanuck, who produced Steinbeck's story about the dust bowl refugees going west to Californy, would have given a mint to use as props.

"Came Up a 'Hellin' " to Get First in Line

While waiting in line during the long days of sullen heat, many of the Speedway okies built rude platforms atop their cars and trucks, the better to see the race, once inside the grounds. One prolific gasoline-Joad built a huge rude stepladder atop his rickety truck, with tiny platforms here and there on the way up, for maw and each kid. Paw took the top spot.

A couple of years ago one of the okies was standing on top of one of these improvised platforms, near a turn, when a wheel sprang loose from a skidding car, shot through the air like a Di Maggio line drive, and belted the platform watcher into eternity with one horrid swat. We saw that one, we're sorry to say.

Anyway here's Harry Futrell. He was just a 'settin' in the former milk truck, eating the hot dust of the passing traffic along the roadway outside the track and drinking hot beer out of a can, when we talked to him. He is a brown man of about 30, with one eye. He had a greasy freshman's cap and khaki pull-overs and a two-bit tie greasy at the knot. He felt pretty good about his distinction, too.

"I'm up outta Murray City, near Memphis," he said. "Me and my buddy, Larry Cleek, got here on a Thursday, it was. We had done some work down around home and gotten a little cash. So we come up here, a 'hellin', in our 33 Chevy, and took first place in line.

"Wasn't none too soon, neither, because the next day old Olin here he come along. And he was upset so much, seeing us first in line, that he busted down to the Derby, bought the wrong ticket, har, and come back in time to still get second in line."

Olin, who works in a Boston paper bag factory when he works, shuffled and said he meant to play Whirlaway, and why, but Harry cut him off, and continued:

Traded Car for Truck to Get Room to Sleep

"Then Dude Reasons come up to join Cleek and me. There wasn't near enough room for me and Cleek to sleep in the '33 Chevvy, so we traded her in and got this old milk truck. The three of us sleep in the back here. We went crazy for a while on the dough we had. You know, beer and whisky. But the last few days we been living, all three of us, on a dollar a day. We cook on a charcoal stove. Me, I like canned spaghetti as good as anything. But Cleek keeps eating beans and pork. And Dude likes to get into a can of sardines."

The boys found a little carpentering work around the track during their long vigil, and watched the whole month of qualifying tests.

"I'm kinda sick of auto racing right now," Harry said, before driving through the portals. "But my ambition still is to drive one of them racing jobs around, just once. Me? I think one of them four-wheel-drive Miller Specials is going to win. They've had tough luck, but this looks like their year.

Griffs Lose To Athletics, 7-4 and 14-4

Six Pitchers Used In Effort to Halt A's; Nats Extend Losing Streak to 12

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats again embraced the opportunity to lose two ball games in a single afternoon, and stepped up their losing streak to 12 straight yesterday. Seventy-five hundred despairing Griffith Stadium fans saw the Athletics lick the Nats in the opening game, 7 to 4, and then make it unanimous for the day by taking the second, which was a cute little 14-to-4 number.

Washington's eleventh straight defeat was the handiwork of Dutch Leonard's pitching and three errors by the Nats. Four Washington pitchers, notably Vernon Kennedy, pitched the A's to victory in that second game.

Lewis Clouts Home Run

Buddy Lewis made something of an effort to stave off defeat for the Nats in that second game. He hit a home run over the right-field wall with George Case on base in the fifth inning to put the Nats in a 4-2 lead, but the advantage was very temporary. The A's reared back at Kennedy for five runs in the next inning and made away with the ball game.

Their double triumph moved the Athletics into fifth-place tie with the Red Sox, and it marked their seventh win in eight clashes with the Nats this season.

Rookie Lester McCrabb, a curve-balling right-hander from Toronto, outpitched Leonard and Arnold Anderson in the first game. Veteran Johnny Babich outpitched almost everybody on the Nats' staff in winning the second game with a six-hit performance.

McCrabb Busy at Plate

McCrabb's triumphs did not end with his pitching. He bashed out three hits, including a two-bagger, in the opening game and each of his blows brought in a run.

The A's pried a run out of Leonard in each of the first three innings. Two walks and Bob Johnson's single produced the first. Singles by Hayes and McCrabb fetched home the second, and in the third the A's picked up their run on consecutive singles by Johnson, Siebert and Sam Chapman.

The Nats, meanwhile, came up with two runs in the second inning after Mickey Vernon beat out a bunt. Myer and Pofahl swatted three-baggers to get the runs home. They weren't particularly lusty triples. Wally Moses and Sam Chapman barely missed shoestring catches on the drives.

McCrabb settled down to six innings of scoreless pitching thereafter until the ninth, and the A's came up with a run in the sixth after Jimmy Pofahl threw wild on Hayes' grounder. Hayes went to second when a third strike knuckle ball against Suder got away from Early, and McCrabb scored him with a double to left.

Troubles Boil and Bubble at Speed Classic . . . and 'Wreck' Wins

Victor Drives Floyd Davis' 'Old Wreck' After 177 Mi.

Young Driver's Car Forced Out, Takes Over 14th Place Auto for Victory

By Bob Considine.

Indianapolis, May 30.—Mauri Rose, a young engineer in the nearby Allison warplane engine factory, drove his Italian Maserati to pieces here today, then stepped into the hopelessly trailing machine of Floyd Davis and masterfully piloted it to victory in the 500-mile speedway race

Winner of the pole position in the qualifying tests, Rose saw his dream of winning his first important race in 10 years of campaigning rapidly disappearing when his sleek Maserati broke down at the 125-mile mark, after Rose had roared into the lead in this hectic, injury-strewn race at the 100-mile mark.

He limped forlornly back to the pits, and there received and eagerly accepted the bid to substitute for Davis. Davis' venerable, 4-cylinder car, a crummy blue and red affair with a big 16 painted on its side, was in fourteenth place when Rose stepped into it at the 177th mile.

Takes Dizzy Chances

From then on he gave a demonstration of driving that was almost without equal in the annals of this often grisly race. He passed fast cars by taking dizzy chances on the turns, and his busy little motor roared on steadfastly when the pace setters began to crack up.

The huge mob, estimated at 162,000, gave him an ovation that blotted out the ear-splitting thunder of the remaining cars, when he streaked across the finish line gayly waving one arm.

His time, or, rather, the car's time for the 500 miles was 4 hours, 20 minutes and 24 seconds. That is an average of 115.117 miles per hour, roughly 3 miles an hour slower than the record set by the late Floyd Roberts.

Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., who had the next best qualifying time to Rose, finished second, one full lap, or 2½ miles, behind Rose. Mays drove a 6-cylinder special made for him by Lou Meyer, retired three-time winner of the gas derby.

Ted Horn Is Third

Third place went to Ted Horn, of Hawthorne, N. J., in a job built by the Thorne Engineering Co. He was two laps behind Rose.

The sultry day, which began with a $150,000 fire in the speedway garage, injuring six persons and reducing George Barringer's $50,000 rear-engined car to twisted scrap, was a sorry one for Wilbur Shaw, the popular defending champion, who narrowly escaped death when he crashed with victory almost in sight.

Gunning for his fourth Indianapolis triumph and his third in a row, the dapper champion was out in front of the roaring pack near the 400-mile mark, after holding the lead from the 150-mile stage, when his Maserati car went out of control while he was passing a slower car on a turn.

Doing better than 120 m.p.m. at the time, Shaw's magenta-colored mount twice swung viciously around on the track, its tires howling like banshees. Then its rear splintered and crumpled against the heavy concrete retaining wall at the top of the steeply banked turn.

Gas Tank Bursts

The gas tank burst under the fearful impact and sprays of high octane shot 50 feet in the air, drenching horrified nearby spectators.

Shaw was treated at the speedway hospital and found to be suffering from nothing except a few superficial bruises and shock.

He wept unceasingly for an hour after the crash.

Much more seriously injured was Everett Saylor, school teacher, of Dayton, Ohio. His Bowles Special skidded through the thick wooden inside rail on the 155th lap of the 200-lap race, while he was running in seventh place, and flung him out as it turned over.

It barely missed a crushing mob of infield spectators, pressed against a nearby barrier. Saylor was rushed to Methodist Hospital, where doctors said his condition was serious. He has a crushed chest and head injuries. Officials were at a loss to explain the accident. The car was smashed to half its normal height.

Cars Lock Wheels

Only 10 miles of the race had been run off when the cars of Emil Andres and Louis Tomei locked wheels at 115 m.p.h. They spun crazily and Joe Thorne, rich young driver, crashed into Andres' car, wrecking it and his own. None of the men was seriously hurt.

Sixteen of the starting field of 31 cars were forced out of the race, either through collisions or mechanical troubles which ranged from a heartbreaking water leak in the radiator of Russ Snowberger's fine

Yanks Beat Bosox, 4-3, Lose Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 30.—A five-hit pitching performance by Earl Johnson, of the Boston Red Sox, went to waste in the first game of today's holiday double-header, when the New York Yankees scored three times in the ninth inning to win, 4 to 3.

But Mickey Harris came right back with a spectacular two-hit job in the nightcap and his teammates tallied some of the surplus runs they couldn't get out of their system in the opener, to overwhelm the Yankees, 13 to 0.

The Yankees committed six errors in the second session to make it one of the most one-sided and ludicrous exhibitions of the year. The usually flawless Joe DiMaggio in center field had two miscues in one inning and four errors for the day.

In the first game Johnson permitted only two hits in the first eight innings, one a homer by Rolfe in the fourth. In the ninth Johnson got two out and two strikes on Frank Crosetti before he singled with the bases loaded for the tying and winning runs.

51,715 Watch Your Chance Capture Race

By the Associated Press

New York, May 30.—Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance won the fifty-fifth running of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park today before a crowd of 51,715 fans, greatest in New York's racing history.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash was second, a length behind the winner and a half a length in front of Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put. Royce Martin's Haltal was fourth, and the favorite, Charles S. Howard's Mioland, was fifth.

Your Chance carried 114 pounds, compared to the 127 for the top-weighted Mioland, and ran the 1¼ miles in 2:02 3-5. He was ridden by Don Meade, instead of his usual jockey, Harry Richards.

The victory was worth $25,200 to the winner, richest Suburban in the 56-year history of the stake. All New York records for betting and attendance were broken.

Sixth in the field of nine was Thomas Howell's Olympus, followed by Arnold Hanger's Dit, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Romanov, and, last in the field, Samuel D. Riddle's The Finest.

Your Chance returned $17.20 for each $2 win ticket in the mutuels. He was $7 for place and $5.20 for show. Hash, who came from last place, returned $4.60 for place and $4 for show. Shot Put was $7.50 for show.

Your Chance was rated off the pace until the field started to come out of the stretch turn. He made his move then and drew out, but was in a drive to win.

Talbert, of Ohio, Wins Connecticut Net Title

New Haven, May 30 (INS).—Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati, bombarded his way to the Connecticut State tennis championship today, beating Joey Fishback, of New York City, 7—5, 6—4, 6—3.

Talbert began to limp during the middle of the last set but went on to win. He led his rival throughout the three sets.

Budge, Perry Gain Finals Of ProTourney

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 30.—Don Budge and Fred Perry, defending champions, advanced today to the doubles finals of the National Professional Tennis Tournament, eliminating Dick Skeen and John Faunce of Hollywood, 9—7, 6—0, 6—4.

Lester Stoefen and Keith Gledhill of Los Angeles disposed of Charles Wood of New York and Joe Nogrady of Dallas in the quarterfinals, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2, and then moved into the title round with a semifinal victory over Lloyd Budge of Lake Forest, Ill. and Berkeley Bell, New York, 6—1, 6—0, 6—3.

Stoefen and Gledhill meet Budge and Perry for the championship Sunday afternoon.

The singles semifinals are scheduled tomorrow afternoon, pitting Faunce against Skeen and Perry against Gledhill.

Misses Miley And Williams Lose in Golf

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., May 30.—On the rolling eighteenth green of River Oaks today Marion Miley and Ella Mae Williams buried their chances for the Women's Trans-Mississippi Golf title. Two of the finest putters in the female brigade, they three-putted the hazardous carpet to lose their semifinals matches.

Mrs. Russell Mann, of Omaha, defeated Miss Miley, who was gunning for her third Trans-Mississippi championship, and 22-year-old Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., chilled Miss Williams. Each match was even through 17 holes, with holes changing like a chameleon's colors.

Miss Miley's defeat rankled in her heart. She had carved a two-over-par 78 to Mrs. Mann's 79. "I guess I just played too hard," she mourned.

Greenbelt's baseball team defeated Carneys Point, N. J., 5-4, here yesterday. Carney's Point, N. J., 5-4, here yesterday. Holochwost was the winning pitcher.

Blozis, 2 Other Hoyas Make I. C. 4-A Finals

By the Associated Press

New York, May 30.—Except for a near-record heave of the shot by Georgetown University's strapping Al Blozis, the preliminaries of the sixty-fifth annual I. C. A. A. A. A., track and field meet were run off at Triborough Stadium today without particular incident.

The crowd was small, all except the most dyed-in-the-wood track fans waiting for tomorrow's finals, and the track was fast. After Blozis had opened the program by casually stepping up and tossing the shot a distance of 53 feet 8½ inches, the bugs were given nothing much to cheer about.

Big Al's herculean effort, which came on his second attempt, barely missed his meet record of 53, 9¾, which he set in winning the event last year. If he wished he probably could pass up the finals tomorrow and still win, merely letting the other boys shoot at the mark he made today. Ed Beetem, of Penn, was the only one who even threatened him today, sailing the iron 50 feet 3½ inches. But Blozis indicated he would take at least a couple of heaves tomorrow in an effort to beat his meet mark. The world record of 57 feet 1 inch, held by Jack Torrance, appears to be well beyond the Georgetown star's reach.

New Team Champion Likely

There probably will be a new team champion when the last of 15 title events is finished tomorrow. Pittsburgh, the defending champion, placed only seven men in the finals, compared to 11 for New York University and 9 for Pennsylvania. Bracketed with Pitt at seven qualifiers apiece were Penn State, runner-up last year; Yale and Boston College. Rhode Island State had five in the running, and Fordham, Georgetown and Tufts four each. The others were nowhere.

Jack Doolan and Morty Alnwick were other Georgetown qualifiers, Doolan gaining a berth in the 100 after failing to qualify in the 220, and Alnwick reaching the 440 finals. Kenny Lyden, the Hoyas' hope in the 880, wasn't in the money in his heat which was won in the fastest time of the trials, 1:54.8, by Al Diebolt, of Colgate.

Alnwick ran second to Hal Bogrow, of N. Y. U., in his heat in the quarter. Bogrow's time was 49.8.

Pawson Sets Mark In Third Victory In Boston Grind

By the United Press

Salisbury, Mass., May 30.—Long-striding Les Pawson, park foreman from Pawtucket, R. I., who this year became the third man in history to thrice win the B. A. A. marathon, set a new course record today in the fifth annual Salisbury Beach marathon and won the New England A. A. U. championship crown.

Pawson ran the 26-mile 285-yard course from Lawrence to the sea in 2:31:28, nearly three minutes under the 2:34:54 2-5 mark set in 1939 by the late Pat Dengis, of Baltimore.

Gerard Cote, of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, who said he wanted to win the race as a present for his bride of a month, finished second. Don Heinicke, of Baltimore, Md., third in last month's B. A. A. grind, placed third in the star-studded field of 27 contenders.

Chisox Turn Back Indians Twice and Near League Lead

Lyons, Lee Halt Indians, 7-1 and 5-2

Chicago Only 2 Games Out of First Place; 37,565 See Bill; Joe Kuhel Stars

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 30.—The rollicking Chicago White Sox lambasted the league-leading Cleveland Indians in both ends of a double-header today, 7 to 1 and 5 to 2, behind the sterling pitching of old Ted Lyons and Southpaw Thornton Lee.

A holiday crowd of 37,565 saw the 40-year-old Lyons set the Indians down with five hits in the opener. Lee followed up with a 6-hitter, the two losses slicing Cleveland's margin over the second-place White Sox to only two games.

Lou Boudreau opened the battle against Lyons with a single, stole second, advanced to third on an infield out and scored on Gerald Walker's roller to shortstop. The veteran pitcher was invincible in the pinches thereafter. The Sox combed Al Smith for seven hits and seven runs in four innings. Joe Kuhel put the game on ice with a three-run homer to climax a four-run splurge in the fourth.

Kuhel Homers Again

The White Sox got away to a running start in the aftermath when Luke Appling singled in the first inning and Kuhel followed with another homer, his sixth of the season. Mike Tresh doubled in the second and scored on a single and Rollie Hemsley's error. The Sox continued their assault on young Jim Bagby in the third, sending him to the showers, Clint Brown replacing him and retiring the side without a run scoring in that inning.

Boudreau Is Down but Wright Is Out on Attempted Steal

Taft Wright, of the White Sox, slid between the legs of Lou Boudreau, shortstop of the Indians, and knocked him off balance but he was out just the same in the seventh inning of second game yesterday. Wright was attempting to steal. Boudreau put the ball on him after taking a throw from Rollie Hemsley man's grounder inspired two runs by the A's off Arnold Anderson in the eighth. With two out, Suder singled to center, and in an attempt to nail Chapman at third, Cramer bounced the ball off the runner's head. Chapman scrambled to his feet and scored, and Suder romped to third on the play. McCrabb singled to right for the second run of the inning.

The A's picked up their last run very simply, in the ninth. Arnold walked McCoy and Johnson simply doubled to right to score him.

Jimmy Pofahl's fourth hit of the game set a two-run rally by the Nats in motion in the ninth. With two out, Case, Lewis and Cramer banged out singles and two runs were across but the rally fell three runs short when Travis flied out.

The A's didn't dally with Kennedy in the second game. With two out in the first inning, McCoy singled and Bob Johnson banged his tenth homer of the season into the left-field seats to set up a 2-to-0 lead.

Washington picked up a run in the third inning on Jake Early's triple to right center and Kennedy's single to center, and in the fourth they tied the score at 2 to 2. Travis and Vernon walked, and Myer's single got the run home.

For the first time during the afternoon Washington was in the lead in the fifth inning, when Lewis unloaded his homer, but the A's didn't countenance that state of affairs long.

Kennedy walked the first three men to face him in the sixth, and the first man out in the inning was Kennedy himself. After the three walks loaded the bases, Kennedy pitched three singles to the A's—by Siebert, Collins and Hayes. Walter Masterson then got the pitching job and hurled a fourth straight hit to the A's—Suder's infield blow. The fourth run of the inning scored when Masterson threw high to second base in an attempt for a force play. When he walked Brancato to refill the bases, Masterson was yanked and Carrasquel finally got the side out.

Carrasquel was cuffed around in the next inning. He couldn't get anybody out. McCoy singled, Johnson drew a walk, Collins and Hayes followed with singles, and Zuber got the pitching job with three runs across. A fourth scored in the inning on Hayes' long fly.

In the eighth, Zuber pitched another run to the A's after walking two batters. Siebert's single got it home. In the ninth, the A's performed the feat of scoring twice without a hit. Zuber walked two hitters, made a wild throw to first, plus a wild pitch, and cat-calls were being heard in the place.

Needing ten runs to tie the score in the ninth, the Nats couldn't get to first base.

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 30.—With Pitcher Rip Sewell playing the double role of goat and hero, Chicago and Pittsburgh divided a double-header today before 17,294 fans, the Cubs winning the first 7-to-6 and the Pirates annexing the second 5-to-4.

Sewell started the first contest for the Pirates but was a victim of triples by young Bob Sturgeon and Phil Cavaretta, both coming with two men on base, and was charged with the loss. Big Bill Lee was credited with his fifth victory of the season in winning this one.

second fastest of the trials. Doolan finished second to Barney Ewell, of Penn State, in his heat of the century. The wining Nittany Lion star was clocked at 9.8.

Doolan barely failed to qualify in the 220. First two in each heat qualified and Doolan placed third in his heat behind Douglas Pirnie, of Harvard, and John DiCarlo, of Villanova. Pirnie won in the fastest time of the heats—21.3.

Lyden was eliminated in the half-mile in a heat won by Arthur Smith, of Cornell, in 1:56.3, second fastest time of the trials. Best performance was turned in by Les MacMitchell, of N. Y. U., who captured his heat in a splendid 1:54.8.

N. Y. U., with its great Leslie MacMitchell considered almost a certainty to capture the mile run and the 880, and with balanced strength in other events, was favored to win out.

Today's trials indicated that four or five super stars will run away with most of the honors in the finals. In addition to MacMitchell, those capable of winning doubles include Blozis, who also led his field in qualifying for the discus; Ed Dugger, of Tufts, gunning for his second straight sweep of the hurdles; Norwood Ewell, of Penn State, favored in both the dash events and qualified for the broad jump, and Al Blount, of Dartmouth, who led today's broad jump trials with a leap of 23 feet 8½ inches and is a leading contender in the high jump.

Dodgers Beat Giants Twice, 8 to 0 and 6 to 2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 30.—The Brooklyn Dodgers extended their newest winning streak to seven games today by sweeping a double-header from the New York Giants, 8 to 0, and 6 to 2, before 59,487 fans at the Polo Grounds.

The Giants were held to five hits in each game, Whitlow Wyatt achieving his eighth triumph against two defeats with the shutout in the first affair and three Brooklyn hurlers sharing the duties in the nightcap.

Wyatt was backed up by a 12-hit attack on three Giants pitchers, with Fiddler Bill McGee the starting and losting chucker.

The second game was a tight mound duel until the ninth when the Dodgers blasted out five runs on four hits that included Joe Vosmik's single with the bases loaded and Dolph Camilli's eleventh homer. The only two other hits Cliff Melton allowed the Dodgers in the entire game were linked for a run in the first inning.

Luke Hamlin pitched no-hit ball for five frames and then was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth after giving up two runs on Mel Ott's double in the sixth. Mace Brown was credited with the victory.

Pittman and Bogart Gain Semifinals of Richmond Golf

EarleSkinker, Malone Lose In 2d Round

Defending Champion Kent and Tomlinson Also Win Hermitage Invitation Matches

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Richmond, May 30.—Two Washingtonians with contrasting golf styles, Gene Pittman, the methodical stroker from Congressional, and Ralph Bogart, the unpredictable District Amateur champion, moved into semifinal berths in the sixth annual Hermitage Invitation Tournament here today.

The visitors were joined in the round of four by Charley Kent, the defending champion and host-city favorite who meets Bogart tomorrow and Bill Tomlinson, a former host-club champion and comedalist who stands in Pittman's way of a final round berth.

The District delegation was in a position to sweep the semifinals berths but Earle Skinker, Columbia's 19-year-old sensation and Charley Malone, who can play a little football, too, bowed out in the second round. Skinker was a 2 and 1 victim of Kent's one-over par golf, best of the day, while Malone bowed to Tomlinson by a 5 and 4 margin.

McAleer Beaten

Pittman's second round victim was the Manor Southpaw, Earl McAleer, who was one up and three to play but lost the sixteenth to a birdie and the eighteenth to a par three as he pushed his tee shot nearly out of bounds. Bogart played high-70 golf which was good enough to account for Harry Thompson, former State open champion, 2 and 1.

The Washingtonians took over the morning matches, Pittman upsetting his clubmate and Maryland State champion, M. Parker Nolan, 3 and 1, while the fourth District players who met Virginians batted a thousand.

McAleer upset the exGeorgetown golf captain and comedalist, Don O'Brien, as the latter's coup de grace backfired on the last hole. One down on the eighteenth, a 160-yard par three, O'Brien pulled a spoon from his bag and pinched the shot 15 feet from the pin. McAleer loked in amazement as O'Brien used a club apparently much too long for the shot, took a five-iron from his bag and knocked his ball inside his opponents, they halved the hole in threes, enabling McAleer to protect his lead.

Skinker Beats Musser

Skinker took care of the Hermitage Club champion, Howard Musser, by a 2-and-1 margin while Malone went 20 holes before beating J. H. Barnett, 1 up. Even at the eighteenth, Malone and Barnett halved the par four nineteenth in sixes and then the former won the next hole with a par. Bogart duplicated his first round victory of 1940 over Bill Cunningham, winning, 3 and 2.

Harry Pitt, playing in the fourth flight after a bad qualifying round, would have been an easy semi-finalist if he was in the championship 16. Manor's three-time winner of the Chevy Chase and Baltimore Invitations was even par in the morning in winning and in the afternoon against Russ Hollebaugh, a 1938 champion whose 86 put him in the fourth bracket, Pitt fired a four-under par out nine of 33 and Hollebaugh had enough. Ray Moore, Manor, also advanced as D. C. Players in the second and third 16 were eliminated.

Bogart, who lost to Kent in the semifinals last year and Pittman, whose straight-shoooting is perfect over this fairly short layout, are at least even money choices to meet for the title this afternoon.

Complete championship flight results and results of Washingtonians in other flights.

Penguin class boats break away in the start of the race down the Potomac to Gunston Cove to take part in the seventh annual Memorial Day week-end regatta of the Potomac River Sailing Association. Starting gun was fired yesterday off Old Old Dominion Boat Club floats in Alexandria

Light Winds Raise Havoc With Regatta

Like painted boats on a painted river, 21 sailing craft crept down the Potomac yesterday from Alexandria to Gunston Cove in the seventh Memorial Day regatta of the Potomac River Sailing Association, most of them never to finish.

Baffled by light and variable winds and finally stopped dead when the ebb tide turned 15 minutes before the official deadline, only 4 of the 21 entries were clocked by the committee. Those four, led by Ernie Covert's Comet Scandal, crossed after the committee went into a huddle and extended the official limit to 6:15, instead of 6 p. m., when they saw Scandal beating toward the finish line across a span of glassy water narrow enough to warrant a special dispensation.

Scandal, which finished the 12-mile local classic in five hours flat, was followed nine minutes later by Judge P. E. Edrington's 20-foot Lady Avon, which crawled the distance in 5:09.36, elapsed time. Spindrift, Lynn Eldridge's 20-footer, was third in 5:23.29, and Charles Trammell's 20-foot Nolle Prosse took fourth place in 5:38.20.

By virtue of his time and his position, Covert stands to take both the Commodore's Cup, for being first to finish on the basis of elapsed time, and the cup donated by Arthur Clephane for the first boat to finish.

Only penguin to finish of six starting was Don Kanode's Anneke Jan, the little dinghy leading the fleet until passed by Scandal just below Fort Washington.

The regatta will continue today with two novelty races and two races in the association's scheduled series at Gunston Cove. A barbecue will be held tonight on the south shore of the cove.

25,000 See Ben Shaba Win at Delaware Park

Veteran Gilbert Gives Victor Smart Ride in $5,000 Dover Stakes, Inaugural Day Feature

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., May 30.—Ben Shaba, sporting the colors of Mrs. R. D. Patterson, Dayton, Ohio, sportswoman, raced to an impressive victory here today in the fourth renewal of the $5,000 Added Dover Stakes, which featured the opening of the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association's 30-day meeting.

Under a perfectly judged ride by Veteran Johnny Gilbert, who made a hurried trip here from New York to handle the colt, Ben Shaba raced past the judges one and one-half lengths in advance of E. K. Bryson's Joe Ray. A. C. Ernst's Alohort was third, another length and a half back of Joe Ray and as many lengths in advance of Millsdale Stable's Doctor Reder.

J. O. Keene's Halcyona was a solid choice with the overflow crowd of 25,000 which taxed the plant to capacity, but she finished a well-beaten fifth and was the fifth straight favorite to disappoint during the afternoon.

The track was lightning fast for the opening day feature and Gilbert was the recipient of an extremely fast ride, Ben Shaba covering the 5 furlongs in the excellent time of 1:00 flat, just three-fifths of a second off the existing track record.

Somewhat tardy at the break, Ben Shaba had but three horses headed through the first half mile. Doctor Reder was setting the pace with Joe Ray and Bidder in close attendance. Midway on the turn Doctor Reder was still in the van, but Gilbert had driven Ben Shaba into fourth place, just a length and a half off the pace. Ben Shaba was still on top at the sixteenth pole but was shortening his stride with every jump. Joe Ray was second, Alohort third and the ultimate winner fourth. Gilbert opened the throttle wide at the 70-yard pole and Ben Shaba responded with a burst of late sped that was not to be denied.

Well, Hottel paid off as Wiffy played the par 37 front nine in 47 strokes, including reaching the green on the long second hole in two shots. Hottel is an average high-90 shooter.

W. C. Eacho won Congressional's Flag Tournament over V. P. Simmons as each had a stroke left over for the nineteenth hole and Eacho hit the longest drive.

CHEVY CHASE

B. L. Colton won the Victor Kauffmann Memorial Day Trophy at Chevy Chase, finishing even with par in the match play against par competition. Colton used a 14 handicap.

Mrs. W. D. Treadway, of Jessups, Md., who competed in the Washington Gun Club's 1941 District of Columbia Metropolitan Area trapshooting yesterday. The event continues today

Walter S. Wilson captured the featured event of the 1941 District of Columbia metropolitan area trapshooting yesterday by taking the 200-target amateur championship class with a total of 196 out of 200. Cawood Oliver was runner-up, with 195. Twenty-eight shooters competed.

In the international class, R. D. Morgan took top honors with 47 out of 50. Second place went to R. J. Luttrell with 46.

C. C. Fawsett shot a consecutive string of 92 in the champisonship division.

An 84-year-old former trapshooting champion, J. T. Parke, showed he had not forgotten all the angles of the game by borrowing a gun and breaking 22 out of 25 as an added attraction.

The doubles championship and handicap contest are scheduled for today beginning at 9:30 a. m. Visitors are welcomed free of charge.

Mrs. Roberts Tops Chestnut Bowlers

Mrs. W. Roberts' 120 game and 340 set for her Chestnut quartet in the Forest Mixed League at Silver Spring led the fair bowlers, with A. Weller, Chestnut, and Ed Hobbs, Locusts, dividing highs for the men with 131 and 365, respectively. The Chestnuts won all three from the Cedars, while Hobbs' count helped his Locusts take the odd game from the Maples. The Pines totaled 447 for high team game, while a 1,261 count took the set laurels for the Chestnuts.

George Havener, Heflin Plumbers, was top man with 140-349 in the Commercial Mixed League at Arlington Bowling Center. Havener's counts helped take the odd game and so the Heflin team remained in a first-place tie with the Arlington Juniors, who won all three from Conklyn Florists. The K. K. V.'s and Barcroft Boosters are deadlocked for second place.

500-Mile Race Won by Rose In Old Wreck

Cliff Bergere, Hollywood stunt man who was appearing in his fourteenth Indianapolis race, drove the entire distance without making one stop in the pits. He finished fifth, but so ill from exhaustion and gas fumes that he had to be carried to first-aid quarters in a wheel chair.

Names of Rose and Davis, who is a 30-year-old contractor from Springfield, Ill., will both be put on the big ugly trophy that has been contested for at Indianapolis since 1911. In 1924 Joe Boyer and L. L. Corum shared the job of driving their Dusenberg to victory, and both names were inscribed on the trophy.

Builder Gets Dough

Most of the $20,000 first prize money, however, will go to Lou Moore, who built and owns the dowdy little car which won the race. Moore also ran the pit crew which serviced it. Rose drove it the full 500 miles last year and finished third. In 1939 Frank Wearne drove it and it finished ninth. With bonuses from auto accessory companies the victory will be worth $40,000.

Shaw won $5,200 in lap prize money. Rose won $1,700 in lap money in the 4-cylinder job which finished first, and $300 in his own Maserati. Mays, who led through the first 50 miles, won $1,700 in lap dough, plus $10,000 for finishing second. Ted Horn's third-place purse was $5,000, Ralph Hepburn's fourth-place money amounted to $3,500 and Cliff Bergere earned $3,000 by his iron man feat. Prize money ranged down to $1,400 for tenth.

Mays Heads Early

Mays led through the first 50, yielded his place to Rose for the next 50, then Shaw took the lead from Rose in a thrilling backstretch duel between the Maseratis, and held it from the 100-mile mark almost to the 400. Then Bergere took over for a short stretch, but yielded the lead to Rose at the 415-mile mark. It was a "whirlaway" finish for the 35-year-old Jewish driver, who was aided somewhat by the many pit stops of Mays, who had become favorite to win the race after Shaw crashed.

But it is doubtful if the heavy-footed Hays, even if he had not visited the pits as often, could have withstood the tremendous finish of a man who drove like a champion from the moment he started off in his borrowed car in fourteenth place.

Joe Hunt Defeats Don Leavens in Tennis Exhibition

Midshipman Joe Hunt found Edgemoor Club's soggy courts advantageous to his powerful net game yesterday and defeated Don Leavens, the newcomer to local tennis circles, in the feature of three exhibitions. The scores were 6—3, 6—3, 6—0. A large crowd saw the matches.

Although Hunt proved himself the superior player, many observers were of the opinion that Leavens, who likes to belt them from the baseline, would have made a better showing on dry courts. The morning rain left the courts soggy and slow.

After whipping Leavens in singles, Hunt, the No. 4 ranking player of the country, joined District Champion Barney Welsh to defeat Leavens and Dick Murphy, a local star, 7—5 in one set of doubles. Welsh then teamed with Hugh Lynch to whip Leavens and Murphy, 7—5, 6—4.

12,000 See Red Wrack Win Charles Town Feature in Mud

4-Year-Old Beats Out Pimlico Lady

Decoration Day Purse Winner Pays $8; Blablah Comes In 3d; $66 Double

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., May 30.—An estimated crowd of 12,000, one of the largest gatherings in the history of this track, today jammed every nook and corner to see the holiday version of the sport of kings in West Virginia. With heavy rain last night and this morning serving to dull interest in picnicking, swimming and touring, this turf plant seemed to act as a gigantic magnet and the customers swarmed through the gates.

Those who could get an eye focused on the oval when Starter John Morissey sent the field away in the Decoration Day Purse saw Mrs. Mary Knierem's Red Wrack forge to the front early and throw his hoofs at his rivals the remainder of the way to win by four lengths. They saw Pimlico Lady, owned by G. G. Waugh, jr., make a game but futile effort to catch the leader in the stretch but her bid was only good enough for second money. They saw O. S. Jennings' Blahblah finish a length farther back in third position.

Blablah Threatens

With the betting trend going toward Arthur Hullcoat's The Fop, Red Wrack paid his scattered backers an $8 mutuel in hanging up his second feature victory of the meeting. The track was muddy but Red Wrack, urged by Jockey "Butsy" Hernandez, skidded over the 6½ furlongs in the creditable time of 1:21 3-5.

Blablah was first to show in front in the run to the clubhouse turn. Red Wrack was close up with Pimlico Lady and The Fop following. Hernandez shot Red Wrack up on the outside and the 4-year-old gelding collared Blablah before reaching the backstretch. From that point to the wire it was "no contest." Jockey Sammy Palumbo pushed Pimlico Lady through on the rail to make a mild bid leaving the backstretch but Red Wrack was too much horse today.

Approaching the wire, Hernandez eased up on the son of By Pass II. Palumbo, however, never gave up and he was booting for all he was worth at the end.

Double Pays $66

Jockey A. F. Martinez, a recent arrival from Cuba, turned in his first victory of the meeting in the first race. He took J. S. Seitz's Romney Royal to the front going to the first turn and held the veteran gelding on top the remainder of the distance. Scarlet Flame was second and Ivonia was third. The winner paid $7.40.

The daily double paid $66.40. Hernandez rode the first winner on the double wager. He kept Butcher Boy, owned by B. W. Dulany, going long enough to stave off a closing rush staged by Fusionette. Sun Bright II was third in this sprint. Butcher Boy returned $8.80.

Mrs. C. P. Miles' James Pal put the finishing touches on the "double." Jockey Danny Scocca turned in a well-judged ride on the son of Jamestown, bringing him from far back to defeat Pleasant Lady. Ivy X was in third position behind the $11.80 shot.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMNEY ROYAL, $7.40, $3.60, $3.00; SCARLET FLAME, $4.80, $3.40; IVONIA, $3.00.

ROMNEY ROYAL went to the front at once under hustling tactics, withstood bids of SCARLET FLAME and was kept to a drive to the end. SCARLET FLAME was roughed about early, moved to contention boldly, but Scott was unable to do the mount justice while blinded by mud. IVONIA was shuffled back early and finished on his own courage. PRINCESS LADY was hard ridden.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good for all but Star Canter. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:20½. Winner, B. W. Dulany's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTCHER BOY, $8.80, $3.60, $3.00; FUSIONETTE, $4.80, $3.80; SUNBRIGHT II, $4.60.

BUTCHER BOY disposed of SUNBRIGHT II to take command and had to be kept under extreme pressure to hold FUSIONETTE safe in the closing drive. FUSIONETTE worked his way to contention on the outside, came with good energy through the stretch and was wearing down the winner at every stride. SUNBRIGHT II was a keen forward early, forced the pace of BUTCHER BOY and weakened gradually. STAR CANTER was away badly, was hard handled and made up ground before hanging in the final stages.

THIRD RACE (Original second, substitute race)—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place ridden out. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:57½. Winner, Mrs. C. JAMES PAL, within striking distance from the start, came wide while improving his position and wore down PLEASANT LADY to win going away. PLEASANT LADY came over sharply at the first turn to take command, drew out, but could not resist the winner while put to extreme pressure. IVY X. was off alertly, improved her position on the outside and weakened. LIL'S DAUGHTER was shut off by PLEASANT LADY at the first turn and tired after getting closest to the pace.

Daily Double—BUTCHER BOY and JAMES PAL Paid $66.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:43½. Winner, J. B. Royston's br. f. GLITTER GIRL went to the front at once, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. CAIDON worked his way to contention on the outside and closed with good energy. BAROGRAPH lost ground while improving his position and hung in the closing drive. LULA KHAYYAM was a forward factor early and tired. LADY MOWLEE threw the boy, ran off and was withdrawn by the stewards.

RED WRACK, hustled going to the first turn, shook off BLABLAH to take a clear lead and drew out gradually to win with speed in reserve. PIMLICO LADY saved ground from the start, moved up approaching the stretch and was held safe at the end. BLABLAH was hard ridden to be closest to the pace early and tired in the final stages. THE POP could not reach serious contention at any stage.

NANNYKINS went to the front boldly after a furlong, drew out, but could not resist the winner while under punishment. HIGH BUD was well placed from the start and ducked in during the stretch run. NIJINSKY was off slowly and was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place ridden out. Went to post at 6:45½. Off at 6:45. Winner, H. W. Pearson's b. h. At The Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

There is one woman who will attest to the fact that there was a large crowd here yesterday. She bought a hot dog and some man, hustling through the mob, took a bite of it and kept right on going. The memorial service before the program began was an impressive sight. Jockeys, horsemen, officials and customers, with heads bared, paid silent tribute to the dead, while Earl Manuel, the track bugler, rendered "Taps." The youngster, who is a member of the American Legion Junior Drum Corps, did a swell job. Robert Lewis, traveling representative of The Post, was a visitor. The press box betting commissioner announced before the card began, "Get them in early, boys. It's Preakness Day at Charles Town." The flamingoes stopped steaming and I could have sworn they were shivering yesterday. I'm going to try to get Norah to knit them form-fitting sweaters before the December meeting. Reds Rowland, poet laureate of the track, was sick yesterday and Francis Rowland, his cousin, batted for him. I suspect many parties headed for picnics wound up at the track. One group arrived shortly after noon and spread the food out in the grandstand. I hope that was lemonade in the jug. Well, Alan Clarke has always maintained that sons and daughters of Mowlee could run all day. For a long period before the fourth race, it looked as if Lady Mowlee, a 4-year-old filly, would run for a week. She began her marathon by rolling free of Jockey W. McDonald just after the field left the paddock. Then she circled the track four times, each time eluding the outrider, much to the delight of the crowd. Horsemen and assistant starters made repeated grabs to stop the determined daughter of Rags but she stopped only when cornered. If somebody had thought to open the gap at the head of the stretch she would have gone to the stable the first time around. She ran an estimated 4 miles. The stewards excused her from the race and the jockey club refunded all bets. Good time yesterday, better time today. See yo uon the rail. BILL.

First race—ROVING EYE has the speed to handle a field of this sort. Needs only a share of the racing luck. LADY BUCK has class and should be in the thick of contention. WANDERING HERO to take care of the others.

Second race—SABANITE failed recently in about the same kind of company. However, this one has worked well and I'm going to string along. SCHLEY AL and BEACON QUEEN are on the reserve list but will be keen contenders if sent postward.

Third race—I'm going to take a shot at FREE RIDE in this field. This plater has worked good enough to beat this kind. TIME PASSES breaks off the rail and is dangerous. EMMA H. turned in a smashing last. REMOLEE and QUICK VINE would move on top but are doubtful starters.

Fourth race—BLUE PRELUDE might be a bit overmatched but will like the off-going and the abbreviated route. I'm going to string along. NAVIGATION, despite high weight, will be a keen factor. HAPPY HOSTESS gets in light.

Fifth race—Although ROYAL BUSINESS is not partial to a rough track, this one is the class of the field and should have no trouble. J. HAL has the early speed of the party and will have to be caught. GROUCHER'S BOY for the show end.

Sixth race—I'm coming up with MAESIDE for this distance test. Gets the No. 1 post and should run over these in the closing stages. COMMANDRESS and SIR BROADSIDE to take care of the others.

Seventh race—AMERICA FIRST seems to have the edge over BLOX in this event. Both like the mile and an eighth. JEAN C. has plenty of speed and should set the pace but probably will dog it in the stretch.

Eighth race—MOON HARVEST gets my call in this distance affair. Promises to turn in a good race. BLUE CYCLONE has been knocking at the door and deserves attention. TROSTAR for the minor award.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take OVERBOST, COUNTY CORK and SUNNY ROSE.

Best bet—MAESIDE.

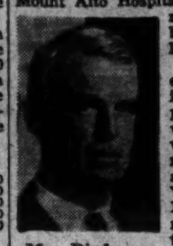
Col. Birdseye, Geographer, Dies at 63

Col. Claude Hale Birdseye, 63, famous topographer, explorer and geographer, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.



In 1912, Birdseye first came into national prominence when he surveyed and mapped the area around Kilauea Volcano in Hawaii. The next year for the Geological Survey, he surveyed the summit of Mount Rainier, mapping the crater and the glaciers around the mountain. On this expedition Birdseye was caught in a blizzard and had to take refuge for some time in a steam cave in the ice.

During the war, Birdseye served overseas, as major of engineers, in charge of topography. He was decorated with the French order, Officer de L'instruction Publique, in 1919. He was a colonel in the organized reserves.

In 1923, the colonel made his most perilous trip, as the leader of ten men who explored the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. The party made its way down the turbulent Colorado, which frequently afforded no possible landing places, through Marble and Grand Canyons, from Lees Ferry, Ariz., to Needles, Calif. The trip was a sensation througout America, and its dangers caught the public's fancy. Frequently the men were reported lost, but they finally made the whole trip unscathed. The results of the expedition—pictures, maps, reports—are a valuable part of the Geological Survey's library.

A native of Syracuse, N. Y., Col. Birdseye attended Oberlin University, with postgraduate work at Ohio State and Cincinnati Universities. For a short time before going to work for the Government, he was an instructor in physics at the University of Cincinnati.

Col. Birdseye was the chief of the Division of Engraving and Printing, United States Geological Survey, from 1932 until the time of his death. In all he spent nearly 40 years making the Government's maps, in the Geological Survey, the General Land Office and the Army. He is credited with 38 topographic maps.

Surviving Col. Birdseye are his widow, the former Grace Gardner Whitney, and three children, Charles W., Frederick H. and Florence W. Birdseye. He lived at 22 Grafton Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

"Stars Over Hollywood" is the title of the new dramatic series which you'll hear over WSV every aturday, starting today, from 11:30 a. m. until noon.

It will have Hollywood's most prominent actors and actresses as guests from week to week and original plays written by a variety of well-known authors.

The first, today, is a comedy called "You Can't Budget Romance," written by Roger Quayle Denny and starring Florence Rice and Russell Gleason. It's the story of a secretary who married her boss and then tried to carry her office efficiency into the home, with very inefficient results.

Some of the stars who will appear on the programs in subsequent weeks include Mary Astor, Margaret Lindsay, Gail Patrick, Robert Armstrong, Chester Morris, Ona Munson and Richard Cromwell.

Incidentally, Evelyn Tyner, who has made something of a name for herself as a pianist in Washington—she had a C. B. S. network show fro mhere for a long time and played at the Neptune Room for a year or so—is to be a guest on Ed Sullivan's "Silver Theater Summer how" over the network at 5 tomorrow night. Miss Tyner now is playing, if you please, on the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria, which is the tops in the entertainment world.

Farmers Vote Today on U. S. Wheat Quota

By the Associated Press

In the AAA's first Nation-wide referendum, wheat farmers will vote today on the question of applying sweeping marketing controls to the bread grain.

The issue was whether farmers would approve a quota system which would give the Government authority to tell each farmer how much he might sell or feed and to penalize violators about 48 cents a bushel on excess grain sold or fed. A favorable vote of at least two-thirds of those participating in the referendum was required.

On the outcome depended the fate of a measure which now supports the price of wheat in this country at a level almost 40 cents a bushel above world prices. Government price-supporting loans must be discontinued if quotas are defeated.

R. M. Evans, AAA administrator, described the loan program as a "vital price prop" and declared rejection of quotas—a result he did not anticipate—would be an act "inviting disaster for thousands of wheat farmers. He said prices, now close to $1 a bushel at Chicago, could be expected to drop at least 35 cents if today's results were against quotas.

The AAA proposed the quotas because of export market losses resulting from the war and other causes and a mounting surplus. With a bumper crop in prospect and granaries crowded with unused grain from previous years, the country has a prospective supply large enough to meet its needs for nearly two years. The quotas are designed to keep the surplus production of this year's crop off the market until it is needed.

AAA officials were confident that quotas would be approved. They said little opposition had been encountered, particularly since the approval of legislation providing for crop loans at 85 per cent of parity—about 97 cents a bushel for wheat—on the major crops. This loan rate—which is contingent, of course, on approval of quotas—compares with last year's basic rate of 72 cents.

Contract Bridge

Charlotte M. Sidway, with partner Robert Morris, played this hand nicely, though a troublesome trump holding by the enemy menaced the four-spade bid. With East and West vulnerable and West dealer, the cards were:

	♠ J ♡ A 10 9 6 5 4 ◇ J 10 9 3 ♣ 7 6
♠ Q 10 9 8 ♡ K Q ◇ K Q 8 4 ♣ A K Q	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ A 6 4 2 ♡ J 8 7 ◇ 6 2 ♣ J 8 5 4
	♠ K 7 5 3 ♡ 3 2 ◇ A 7 5 ♣ 10 9 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The opening lead: 2 ♣.

The deuce of clubs fell to the queen in dummy; declarer pushed the spade queen through North catching the jack and losing to South's king. A club was returned to the king on the board. The king of hearts drew out the ace, and a heart back threw the lead in dummy again with the queen. A trump to the ace affirmed the bad break and a low diamond was played toward the king, queen. South jumped in with the ace and exited with a low trump. The two remaining queens, diamond and club, were taken in the closed hand. The lack of clubs removed the remaining low diamond, and a trump lead to dummy left the West cards high.

Miss Sidway made four spades, losing a trump and two aces. Against a low trump opening lead, other declarers went down as much as two tricks.

Queen Meets U. S. Newsmen And Talks Tea

By the Associated Press

London, May 30.—Half a dozen American newspaper correspondents were unexpectedly presented to Queen Elizabthe today when she spent half an hour at the food ministry watching a demonstration designed to help housewives set a tasty table on reduced food rations.

The Queen chated pleasantly with the newspapermen about American and British preferences in food and drink; observed that Americans, unlike the British, seem to be able to take their tea or leave it—and saw to it that everyone in the group got a cup of sea.

She showed enthusiasm over the government's latest effort to instruct housewives in the art of cooking under wartime difficulties and agreed that morale begins in the kitchen.

When the Queen visited bomb-scarred Westminister Abbey shortly after the May 10 fire-blitz raid she dalked with a slight limp and it was observed the instep of her left foot had been bandaged with adhesive tape. Official sources declined to discuss the matter, except to say it was nothing serious.

So we were still in the dark today as to whether the Queen had suffered a slight injury in the May 10 raid or simply had met with one of those small mishaps which can happen anywhere to anyone's foot.

It was obvious today that her Majesty no longer walked with a limp; but as for that adhesive tape—no one asked her about it, and I, for one, never even looked at the Queen's foot.

It's one of those things that isn't done here.

Dean Powell Is Pondering Whether He Will Accept His Election as the Bishop Coadjutor of Maryland

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington, who already has declined one bishopric, yesterday was still deliberating on his election to another one—that of bishop coadjutor of the Diocese of Maryland.

Emerging from a conference at the College of Preachers with a special committee that last Wednesday informed him of his election, Dean Powell told The Post that he would have his decision "within a few days."

The special committee, comprising two laymen and two clergymen of the Maryland Diocese, were Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of Old St. Paul's Church, chairman; the Rev. W. A. McClenthen, rector of Mount Calvary Church; Judge Henry Harlan, of Emmanuel Church, and Henry White, Memorial Church, all of Baltimore.

Two years ago Dean Powell declined election to the bishopric of the Diocese of Louisiana in order to carry on his original plans of expanding the work of the College of Preachers.

The college annually picks the most promising Episcopal clergymen in the United States for a period of special training. Dean Powell has been associated with the college for 16 years as student, adviser, teacher and now as warden.

He was a member of the first conference of the college, which assembled in June, 1925, four years before the new building was ready for use. He was a member of the council of advice to the late Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, first warden of the college.
